Columbia, S. C., March 5—Winter travelers in Southern California, the Gulf Coast and Florida read weather reports to see how much colder it is in New York, Boston, Chicago.

Americans, with comparatively small troubles, may find comfort in reading about Greece, where government airplanes are bombing government battleships, seized by rebels. "From the Averoff," prideof the Greek navy, "flames rose high" when a 250-pound baby bomb struck her deck. What would happen if a 5000-pound bomb struck such a ship?

Ancient names, taking you back to schooldays, are scattered through Greek civil war reports. Venizelos, a true Greek patriot, supporting the revolution, dwells on the little island of Crete, where the minotaur, half human, half bull, used to live and devour youths and maidens from Athens.

Mention of old Thrace, now Bulgaria, that produced Abrotomon, mother of Themistocles, who persuaded the Greeks to rely on their wooden ships, makes you wonder what he would say to flying ships destroying warships of steel.

A while ago Lord Rothermere, warning his country usefully, as his brother, Lord Northcliffe, did in the big war, was telling the British that they must have at least 5000 fighting planes. His advice, at first ridiculed, is now taken seriously and Britain will have planes.

We shall have them, the biggest of all air fleets, but not until planes from Europe or Asia shall have taught us a lesson.

Paris and American dressmakers tell the woman that she must now dress in a fashion "revealing the outlines and curves of the human form." To know exactly what the outlines of the human form are, take a walk through the streets of Miami near public or private bathing beaches.

You will see strolling to their homes, as free from care or self-consciousness as little birds, hundreds of ladies, some tall and thin, a majority short and fat, with literally nothing on from the waist up that could not be replaced by two half-coconut shells fastened to the chest with a string around the back of the neck, and below the waist a wisp of material that would make Eve's skirt of leaves look like a ball dress.

Such costumes, as a matter of fact, are unwise "salesmanship." The old-fashioned muslin dress, down to the ankle, up to the neck, aroused romantic interest and uncertainty. The two half-coconut-shell costumes cause the eligible young man to say, "If that is all there is to it, I shall postpone matrimony."

This writer, traveling north from Miami, would advise the "two-coconut-shell" ladies to adopt the marking engraved above the door of a Greek temple, "Not too much, not too little," especially not too much.

Today, Amarillo, Tex., celebrated "Mother-in-Law Day." From five to ten thousand mothers-in-law gathered, including Mrs. Claude Miller, mother-in-law of Texas' governor, James V. Allred.

Each mother-in-law present received a bunch of sweet peas, entitling her to "free ice cream, coffee, picture show and dancing." With the right kind of son-in-law it should not be necessary to go so far for such simple pleasures.

Every son-in-law should realize that his mother-in-law is not only the creator of his wife, but also of his children. Without her the children would not be there, and if he had another such, they would probably be inferior.

Governor Allred's mother-in-law at the celebration wore a garland of sweet peas, and there were seventeen bands in the five-mile parade. That settles the old, foolish mother-in-law joke.

The Duke of Gloucester, son of King George, examined the Panama Canal from an airplane after luncheon at the British Legation in Panama City. He saw a valuable piece of property, valuable to British shipping. Will we allow foreign ships to use the canal as cheaply as our own ships use it, in spite of the fact that we built it?

He also saw a piece of property that any nation with a sizeable airfleet could put out of commission with greatest of ease, sending our ships once more around the tip end of South America.

We shall realize that after it has been done. It would be the first step in a war after bomb-

Doctors Report Alyce Is Better

TEST Bares Pain GONE

ATTENDANTS ELATED

3 P. M. BULLETIN

(Signed)
DR. WILLIAM MASON
DR. GEORGE C. KING

By PEGGY DOYLE

Out of Truesdale Hospital at 8:25 today came the first official, enthusiastic bulletin regarding the condition of 10-year-old Alyce Jane McHenry.

This optimism was reported in a 10:30 bulletin signed by Dr. King and Dr. William Mason:

Just before the dawn, at about 5 o'clock, the valiant little girl from Omaha, Neb., underwent an important test that went a long way to indicate the success of the upside-down stomach operation performed on her Monday.

Pain Vanished

This was a test that on previous occasions had turned her blue with pain and difficult breathing and for the first time the child voiced objection to an order.

"The doctors know best," said Mrs. Luella McHenry, her mother, and Alyce Jane withdrew her objection.

The test was made and no pain accompanied it. Attendants were elated.

"You're the nicest man I've ever known," she said.

Alyce slept, awakening now and then to sip water from a teaspoon. She was more comfortable. Her pulse was steadier. The fear of intestinal strangulation or adhesion was abated.

Alyce Jane's mother, appearing brighter and more rested, laughed as she said:

"The thing that pleases me most is that Alyce Jane now has a regular little pod stomach just like any other child. Before, it was always so flat."

Firemen Fight to Save Baby

His respiratory system paralyzed, 13-year-old Harvey H. Drown, Jr., of Cliftondale, was kept alive all last night and today by Saugus firemen working in relays with an inhalator and oxygen.

Sixteen tanks of oxygen had been used by noon and several emergency trips were made in search of a new supply.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Drown of of 3 Raddin terrace, has been ill a month with spinal meningitis.

He took a sudden turn for the worse last evening and at 6 o'clock Dr. Mary Penney, attending physician, called on the fire department to keep him alive.

Ten tanks of oxygen possessed by the Saugus fire department were emptied. An emergency trip to Boston netted only three more. Melrose and Lynn fire departments increased the supply.

COUGHLIN Answers Johnson ON AIR MAR. 11

By International News Service

Detroit, March 6—The Rev. Fr. Charles E. Coughlin will reply to General Hugh S. Johnson, Monday, March 11, in a half hour address over the same national radio hookup over which Johnson attacked the "radio priest" and Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana as "Pied Pipers" of politics.

Until then, it was learned, Father Coughlin will have "nothing to say."

"PINK SLIP" Repeal Approved

Washington, March 6 (INS)—Repeal of "pink slip" income tax publicity was recommended by the House ways and means committee today by an overwhelming vote.

The outright repeal bill of Rep. Doughton (D.) of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, was approved without change. The bill will probably be brought into the House tomorrow for passage.

PRICES Too Low U. S. VIEW

ROOSEVELT NOT TO CUT DOLLAR

Washington, March 6 (AP)—Commodity price levels were viewed by President Roosevelt today as not yet sufficiently high in relation to the nation's debt burden.

He definitely turned away from any discussion of further dollar devaluation as a means of prompting price rises, however.

The President, at his regular press conference, said he did not think the time had arrived for stabilization of domestic commodity prices. This reply apparently was given on the theory the price level had not yet relieved the debt burden sufficiently.

Asked if this meant further devaluation of the dollar, Mr. Roosevelt declined to make any comment. Later, when market reactions told of varying interpretations of this refusal, the White House hastened to make it clear no intimation was intended of any intention on the President's part to devalue the dollar further at this time.

Mr. Roosevelt some time ago suggested the 1926 price level was the administration objective. He was asked today if recent rises in commodity prices had brought about the point for stabilization.

His offhand answer was no. He said he thought a campaign for higher commodity prices had greatly relieved the enormous debt burden, but not sufficiently yet.

LEGION Bonus Bill WINS

VOTED IN HOUSE COMMITTEE

By International News Service

Washington, March 6—By a vote of 14-11, the House ways and means committee today approved the Vinson soldiers' bonus bill, backed by the American Legion, as the basis of a bill to be presented to the House.

The Vinson bill was chosen over that of Rep. Patman (D.) of Texas, which provides for payment by currency expansion.

The vote was a victory for the American Legion and for anti-inflationists.

After adopting the Vinson bill, the committee decided to consider it for amendment later in the day. Its backers are hopeful it can be brought into the House for passage on Friday and sent to the Senate.

First Vote 23 to 2

The first question decided by the committee was whether there should be a bonus bill. By a vote of 23—2 the committee decided to back cash payment.

The next motion was by Representative Cooper (D.-Tenn.), to express a preference for the Vinson bill, and the vote was 14—11.

Efforts were made later in the committee to revise the bill by adding a method of payment sponsored by former Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma. Under this method, also called an inflation plan, bonds would be issued and deposited with federal reserve banks as a basis for federal reserve notes to be issued to pay the bonus.

Patman Bill May Win

The Patman forces said House leaders had promised they could offer the Patman bill as a substitute for the Vinson bill on the House floor.

The House poll, according to officials of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, shows the Patman bill will pass the House.

"The result of the committee vote is entirely satisfactory to the Veterans of Foreign Wars," said National Commander James Van Zandt.

"The fact that a change of two votes in the committee would have reversed the situation shows the strength of the Patman bill."

HEIRESS "WEPT" AT GAY PARTY

By International News Service

Pinehurst, N. C., March 6—Solicitor Rowland Pruette today charged, as the coroner's investigation into the mysterious death of beautiful 22-year-old Elva Statler Davidson, bride of two months and heiress to the Statler hotel fortune, was resumed, that the truth about her death was being concealed.

"We aren't getting the full truth about this case," Pruette said. He would not elaborate his assertion.

'To Get Tight'

A millionaires bride weeping and intending "to get tight" at what was supposed to be a gay party, was a picture given of Mrs. Davidson, Jr., today at the inquest.

Contradicting other witnesses who said they saw little unusual in Mrs. Davideon's attitude at a spaghetti supper a few hours before her body was found, two witnesses, one a Massachusetts girl, said they saw her in intermittent outbursts of weeping.

Bernard Freeman, Pinehurst newspaperman, said he heard Mrs. Davidson say:

"I'm going to get tight."

He said he noticed her drinking only wine, but that there was a highball before her at the table.

Miss Jane McMullen, of Hyannisport, Mass., a member of the party, and John Notragiacomio, waiter at the Spaghetti Club, both said Mrs. Davideon wept at the table.

Jane's sister, Isabelle, also a witness, said she did not notice Mrs. Davidson weeping at the party.

Shortly thereafter—about 4:30 a. m., according to evidence—witnesses have said the party broke up.

The lifeless, scantily-clad body of the former Olympic team swimmer, who came here two months ago on her honeymoon with B. Bradley Davidson, 41-year-old Washington, D. C., socialite, was found in the Davidson garage, crumpled in the bottom of her

SOLDIER BURIAL FOR HOLMES

BODY OF 'GREAT DISSENTER' TO REST IN ARLINGTON GRAVE

By Associated Press

Washington, March 6—A soldier's funeral was prepared today for Oliver Wendell Holmes, "great dissenter" of the Supreme Court, who died of bronchial pneumonia at 2:15 a. m. today.

On Friday, which would have been his 94th birthday had he lived, the nation's leaders will gather in All Souls' Church to honor the man almost universally hailed as one of America's foremost liberals.

Chief Justice Hughes and the other men who served with him on the nation's highest tribunal will be honorary pallbearers. The burial, in Arlington National Cemetery, will be a military one in recognition of the grievous wounds he suffered as a Union soldier in the Civil War.

The full, rich life of the retired justice ended serenely this morning in his old red brick house a few blocks from the White House. His physician, Dr. Thomas A. Clayton, said it was the "most peaceful death I ever saw."

Friends at Side

When Mark Howe, one of his former secretaries, stepped to the door of the old house at 2.20 a. m. to tell reporters of his friend's death, grief was written deeply upon the young man's face.

He read a brief announcement of the funeral plans and then rejoined the saddened group inside.

The others who were at the bedside when the justice died—Edward J. Holmes of Boston, a nephew; Mrs. Edward Holmes, Thomas Corcoran, government attorney, and Mary Donnelan, a faithful servant, stayed on.

McKNIGHT MUST Serve Prison Term

Edwin T. McKnight, former president of the closed Medford Trust company, must serve a four to five year sentence in state prison on a charge of larceny, the State Supreme Court ruled today.

McKnight on February 16 refused a pardon from the Cambridge house of correction where he is serving a two-year term pending his appeal to the Supreme Court.

The full bench ruled that McKnight failed to avail himself of the right to appeal in the specified time.

BEVERLY Wreath for Holmes

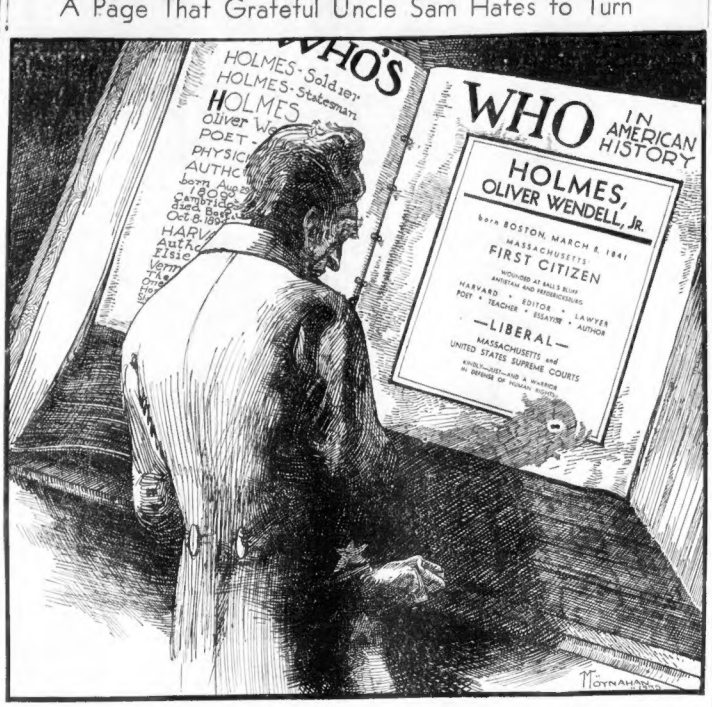
A Page That Grateful Uncle Sam Hates to Turn



"Finis" is written at last to the life record of Oliver Wendell Holmes, grand old man of American jurisprudence. As a soldier, a scholar, a humanitarian, he earned the gratitude and love of a nation. The page on which his notable achievements are inscribed is one which Uncle Sam now turns with deepest sorrow and reluctance. (Drawn by John Moynihan, Boston Evening American Staff Artist.)

ing the Capital and White House with gas.

The crime problem may interest citizens when they learn that crime costs Americans, on the average, $120 a year, each.

That means a total of something more than fifteen thousand million dollars a year, about half the big national debt.

Criminals on parole cause part of the trouble. For instance, the distinguished former governor of Oklahoma, called "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, released a number of prisoners so great that it takes "one hundred and twenty-five single space typewritten foolscap pages" to print their names.

Among others he released "three hundred and fifty-six convicted of murder."

Criminals are very often released to save the cost of feeding, lodging and providing keepers. Why not make them self-supporting on some well-chosen, sufficiently large island near the North Pole or the Equator, owned by the states in common, with a few fast patrol boats and airplanes to prevent escape, permitting convicts to live together without keepers and become well acquainted by organizing their own government?

The result might make them appreciate organized government after release.

Our army is excited about a "new type of attack plane," wings turning up very aggressively with a coating of steel that will protect it from rifle bullets and machine-gun bullets. It is expected to fly low and "mow down" infantry or cavalry with machine-gun fire. Whose infantry or cavalry will it "mow down?" is not said. Not our own surely, and no foreign country will send infantry or cavalry here. If they send anything, they will send airplanes.

The English have already mounted on airplanes not rifles or machine-guns, but heavy guns that shoot downward and in all directions, admirably.

HOLMES FORESAW WAY OF HIS DEATH

By Universal Service

Washington, March 6—The "little finishing canter" is over, and Oliver Wendell Holmes has come "to a standstill."

Thus today, in the manner described by the jurist himself as the proper way one's last days should be lived, came the death of the former supreme court justice.

Born 94 years ago, Holmes passed away in his simple red brick house in Washington where he lived quietly since his retirement from the high court bench in January, 1932.

The spontaneous tribute to his memory, which came immediately from persons of the highest to the lowest stations, bore out the statement of then President Hoover, who said:

"I know of no American with such a sense of affection and devotion of the whole people."

Soldier, editor, lecturer, author, philosopher, statesman and jurist, Holmes rounded out his life alone. His wife, with whom association grew ever closer in the autumn of his life, preceded him in death six years ago. They had no children.

Until several weeks preceding his death and his health became feeble he spent much time motoring over the Virginia countryside, touring the bloody Civil War battlefields where he saw service in the Union army.

Born in Boston

Born in Boston March 8, 1841, Holmes arrival was signalized by his father, Oliver Wendell Holmes, the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," in a letter to his sister. It said:

"My Dear Ann: Last evening between eight and nine there appeared at No. 9 Montgomery place a little individual who may be addressed hereafter as —— Holmes, Esq., or the Hon. —— Holmes, M. C. or his excellency —— Holmes, president, etc., etc., but who for the present is content with scratching his face and sucking his right forefinger."

He was graduated from Harvard Law School 20 years later, and immediately answered the call to the colors.

At Ball's Bluff, a minie ball entered his left breast above the heart, emerging on the right side. His missed death by inches. Again at Antietam he was seriously wounded, this time through the neck, and in other engagements his youthful zest for the thick of the battle almost brought him to an untimely end.

"War, when you are at it, is horrible and dull. It is only when time has passed that you see that its message was divine.

"I rejoice at every dangerous sport which I see pursued. . . . If once in a while—in our rough riding a neck is broken, I regard it, not as a waste, but as a price well paid for the breeding of a race fit for leadership and command."

After war came the law, and his writings. He published the twelfth edition of Kent's Commentaries, edited the American Law Review, and gained a permanent niche as an author with his "The Common Law."

He practiced law in Boston from 1873 to 1882, then ascended to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts where he remained until in 1902 President Theodore Roosevelt named him to the United States Supreme Court.

Ever Liberal

Longer than any other, and with a distinction probably never surpassed, Holmes served on the court. His vigorously liberal views, frequently in sharp contradiction with the majority opinion, were delivered in an easy literary style.

Human rights are greater than property rights, greater than laws, or "rules" as he termed them, Holmes believed.

His love for the common man extended only to his as a mass. He had no patience with stupid individuals, although he might fight manfully for their rights. Profanity he believed, was a sign of mental weakness, denoting lack of an educated man's vocabulary.

He smoked cigarettes for a time, but gave them up as frivolous. With his wealth of classical knowledge and skill in languages, he was fond of risque French novels.

More than six feet tall, even when age bowed his magnificent physique, Holmes was conspicuous by his fierce white moustache and hair, and his piercing black eyes.

CURLEY'S WARRING AIDS DEADLOCKED

On two verbal war fronts the combatants stood on their dignity while the Governor was on a plane flying back to Boston from Florida.

William A. Bodfish, whose tilt with Chief Secretary Richard D. Grant last week first revealed trouble in the ranks, said it had been suggested that he apologize to Grant.

He said:

"I will not apologize I did nothing to warrant an apology. I will, however, because of the high esteem in which I hold His Excellency, the Governor, go halfway to make peace. But under no circumstances will I apologize.

John H. Backus, legal secretary, issued a similar denial to Major James Winston, said to have been threatened by Backus for a joshing that grew out of the Grant-Bodfish feud.

Major Winston, irked by the publicity, telephone Backus at his New Bedford home and demanded a written apology. The reply shot back:

"I will not write an apology. If you wish I will apologize, but I will not write it."

"As far as I am concerned they can keep right on. If any man in public life is so careless of his reputation as to lend himself to a deliberate attempt to forestall Governor Curley's move to rid the community of undesirable underworld characters, that's his worry, not mine."

HOLMES Death Adjourns HIGH COURT

"It is my sad duty to announce that our former colleague, Mr. Justice Holmes, passed away this morning.

"Peacefully, painlessly, and in the fullness of time, came the inevitable end—the close of a career of unique distinction as patriot, scholar, judge. We have lost a great jurist and a noble friend."

The court will attend the funeral services Friday.

By Associated Press

Washington, March 6—A tribute to Oliver Wendell Holmes was paid on the Senate floor today by Senator Walsh (D.-Mass.), from the late former justice's home state.

Describing Holmes as a "lawyer of the highest integrity," and an "authority on jurisprudence," Walsh traced the history of the famous son of Massachusetts through the Civil War, through 20 years on that state's supreme court and 29 years on the United States supreme court.

"No man in the nation's history," the senator said, "served the cause of justice more devotedly or more continuously."

Expressing the personal sorrow of himself and Mrs. Roosevelt, the President said that "the people of America mourn the death of the venerable and beloved justice."

In his statement, he said:

"We cannot minimize the grief of his passing, but we can find solace in the thought that he was with us for so long. His was the life of rare distinction; soldier, scholar, author, teacher, jurist and gallant gentleman, he personified throughout his long career the finest American traditions.

"Endowed with the keen and piercing intellect which was mellowed by kindly humor and understanding, he had a powerful and beneficent influence upon the nation."

Duel 'Success'

Picture from International News Photograph Service)

THELMA TODD

Los Angeles, March 6—Containing a threat of possible death, a letter demanding that Thelma Todd, screen actress, pay $10,000 to a prominent band leader has been turned over by the coroner's detective to Department of Justice agents, it was revealed here.

Authorities explained that the author of the missive, one of several received by the actress within the last few months, probably intended to designate the band leader as a "go-between," planning to obtain the money from him should it be paid.

Miss Todd and the designated musician are friends.

The note was addressed to Miss Todd at her Culver City studio. It was received there on February 25 and was postmarked Long Island City, N. Y., February 12. It read:

Pay $10,000 to Abe Lyman in New York by March 5 and live. If not our Sun Francisco boys will lay you out. This is no joke.

FRENCH DEPUTY SHOT IN WRIST

Eye-Witness Story

By CHARLES FOLTZ
Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Paris, March 6—Deputy Cesar Campinchi was shot through the wrist and suffered the severance of an artery today in a duel with Deputy Horace De Carbuccia. He was taken to a hospital.

The deputies, both of whom are Corsicans, had quarreled over an article published in a weekly newspaper owned by De Carbuccia.

I was fortunate enough to be the only "disinterested" witness by the simple expedient of going to the field long before dawn and awaiting the duelists to arrive.

They were preceded into the stadium by three guards, accompanied by three police dogs. The dogs and their masters ferreted out an amazing number of would-be spectators, for the preliminaries leading up to the duel had been well publicized.

All Paris Agog

Campinchi had refused to retract "an offensive letter" which Carbuccia said his parliamentary colleague had written. Both had named seconds and pistols had been chosen as the weapons. All Paris was agog over the matter.

Guards rounded up the curious persons in the stadium rapidly. They were discovered in the grandstands and elsewhere about the grounds. Soon the park was cleared.

It was shortly after dawn that the little party of men engaged in the "affair of honor" filed into the field.

With Campinchi, as his seconds, were former minister of pensions, Raymond Miellet and the former head of the Paris Bar Association, Fernand Payen. De Carbuccia's seconds were Edmond Recouly, a writer, and Deputy Jean De Nadaillac.

The referee was Jean Joseph Renaud, the well known writer and authority on dueling who has often been in the United States and who has conducted more duels than any other man in France. With them also were two doctors. The three guards stood by.

Shortly after the little party had assembled in the vast area of the playing field, the seconds, under Renaud's directions, measured off 20 paces. Campinchi was placed at one terminal of this distance and De Carbuccia at the other.

Dressed in Fashion

Each was dressed in the height of dignified fashion. Both the men wore dark clothes; both wore their coats; strangest of all, each wore gloves. It was as though they were dressed to go to an afternoon tea.

The weapons were produced by the seconds. There were two pistols, each a regulation dueling arm and each exactly matching the other. They were carefully and gravely examined by Renaud.

Weapons were handed to the duelists.

Campinchi appeared the more nervous. The hammer fell on the charge just as it was given to him and the pistol exploded prematurely with no harm to anyone. It was immediately reloaded and given back to him.

Everyone stepped back. In a vast silence, the referee shouted "Fire!"

De Carbuccia stood quietly for a moment, then raised his own gun and fired. There was no immediate indication that either shot had taken effect.

Again came the command to fire and again Campinchi was the first to raise his gun.

The seconds conferred with each other and with the duelists.

Then they carefully took the pistols and walked over to the wall to discharge them harmlessly against the stone. The shots struck uncomfortably close to where I was standing.

As he went out, he said: "Excuse me for having bothered you and thank you for your sympathy. It touches me deeply."

STORK COMPLICATES VAUGHAN LITIGATION

Winging his way today to the bedside of Mrs. Margaret C. Vaughan of Needham, the stork added one more complication to a legal tangle involving the late Dr. Walter W. Vaughan's $50,000 estate.

New Vaughan Heiress Born

Baby Complicates Fight Over Will

The baby, posthumous daughter of the late Dr. Walter W. Vaughan, was born to his widow, Mrs. Margaret G. Vaughan, of Needham, who has begun a battle to break the doctor's will disposing of a $50,000 estate without providing for her and her young son, Walter. A caesarian operation was necessary.

The new baby became at once, as an heir-at-law, an added party to litigation over the will.

Dr. Vaughan died suddenly last July, cutting off his widow and a son, and leaving his estate to a sister Dr. Lilah M. Vaughan of Waltham.

At the time Dr. Vaughan had received a divorce decree and it was only through action in Middlesex court that Mrs. Vaughan had herself ruled his legal widow.

SPOKESFIELD LOVE TRYSTS REVEALED

Before Wife's Death

WASN'T LIVING HOME AT TIME, WITNESSES SAY AT TRIAL

Twenty-four hours before his wife's mangled body was found on a train cowcatcher last September, Clifford C. Spokesfield, 26, Westwood ERA musician, told of a tryst with a Canton girl, according to testimony today.

He told a friend, three days before, that he was not living at home, it was asserted.

These were highlights of testimony at trial of Spokesfield in Dedham court on charges that he murdered his 22-year-old wife and threw the body in front of the train to cover the crime.

Frank Taylor of Stoughton, a mechanic by day and a musician at night, told of the Canton tryst under questioning of District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing.

After testimony that he had known Spokesfield for four years, Taylor was asked:

Q—Did you see Spokesfield on the night of September 21, the night before his wife was killed? A—Yes, he was alone in his car.

Q—Where was he going? A—Canton.

Q—For what? He said he had a date with a girl.

Q—Did you see him the next day? A—Yes, at my house about 10 o'clock in the morning.

Quizzed on Talk

Q—What did you talk about? A—I told him about an orchestra job I was getting for him.

Spokesfield was quoted in a police statement at the time of his arrest that he was on the way to Taylor's house with his wife when she was taken sick and either jumped or fell over Green Lodge bridge in front of the train.

Joseph Demingo of East street, Dedham, another musician friend of Spokesfield, was asked:

Q—How long after you met Spokesfield did you have talk with him in regard to his wife? A—About five or six months. (The nature of the conversation was ruled out by objection.)

Q—When was the last time you talked with him about his wife? A—September 18 or 19.

Q—What did he say? A—He said he was not living at home.

Q—Did he say why? A—No.

Q—Did you ever meet Marie, his wife? A—Yes, at their home.

A series of letters was introduced during the testimony of Taylor but admission of conversation in regard to them was withheld pending a ruling from the court.

According to testimony of a Boston insurance agent, Spokesfield was beneficiary of insurance policies that provided $1000 double indemnity in the event of his wife's death by accident.

Theft at Door of City Hall

Police Track Down Stolen Revere Knobs

They are not ordinary knobs. They are massive and made of solid brass. And, moreover, they were stolen from Revere city hall.

One theory is that the knobs were stolen as a prank. The other is that vandals took the knobs to cash them in at a junk shop. Inspectors J. Harry Gearraugy and William C. Gibson are on the trail of the knobs.

22,375,000 Now on Relief

Washington, March 6 (AP)—The federal relief population today reached a record high of 22,375,000, as Harry L. Hopkins pushed efforts to increase contributions from states and communities. Relief administration officials estimated that 5,400,000 families, averaging four to a family, and 775,000 single persons were on relief.

Flags at Half-Staff

By order of Governor Curley, flags on state buildings will be displayed at half staff next Friday, the day of the funeral of former Supreme Court Justice of the United States, Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Not Much Left but Shirt

JOE FOX MRS. EDITH FOX

Baby Victim of Thieves Proves He Can "Take it"

All he asks is that they leave him his shirt.

His first birthday will be tomorrow, but he's already qualified to sit down with the crime commission and discuss, from first hand knowledge, the dereliction of the nation.

He figures maybe somebody who can't afford to buy such things needs them for another baby so he's not actually angry about it.

ROSS Publicity Bill REVEALED

Mayor Charles A. Ross of Quincy, whose election expenses are under fire in a petition to unseat him, paid a publicity man $10 a day for 15 days before election, according to testimony today.

Russell T. Bates, defeated by Ross in the primary, seeks with others to remove Mayor Ross on the ground that he violated the corrupt practices act by expending more than the law allows.

Bennison testified he received a check for $150 for writing Ross articles for Quincy newspapers.

Colin H. Campbell of Stoughton street, Quincy, testified he was given an ERA job by Ross after he told the mayor his wife was going to resign as secretary to a campaign committee of his opponent.

Fraud Charged

He was arrested and released on $500 bail after several persons complained that he collected money for them but that he kept it for himself.

Imagine it! A private party for babies only, at the Massachusetts Osteopathic Hospital—and along comes a newspaper cameraman, butting in where he hasn't been invited! Well, he isn't going to take advantage of year-and-a-half-old Bruce MacDonald of Newton Center. Bruce is covering his face with both dimpled hands. And Bobby Werner, aged six months, of Arlington, is pretending to pay no attention, anyhow. Katherine J. MacMillan, 20-months-old Watertown miss, seems about to yield to temperamental tears. And, as for Jane Malena Batt, 11 months, of West Roxbury, she merely snaps her fingers at the interloper.

SURPRISE For Mrs. GOULD

"PRINCE" FAILS TO TESTIFY

By Associated Press

New York, March 6—An ex-proprietor of a Paris bar frequented by a gay crowd of American expatriates testified today that Mrs. Wilma E. Gould once offered to "take care" of him if he would introduce her to some of his wealthy men customers.

After the witness, John Stanley, left the stand, Leon M. Prince, counsel for two of the men who, Mrs. Gould charges, hired "Prince Mike Romanoff," whose real name is Harry Gerguson, to compromise her for divorce evidence, rested his case.

"I feel we have showed Mrs. Gould's allegations have not been proved," Prince said during a short recess. "Of course, I have no intention of putting Gerguson on the stand."

Gerguson was not in court today.

Gayety in Paris

Under questioning by D. L. Morris, a defense attorney, Witness Stanley said he formerly operated the Luigi Bar in Paris, and that Mrs. Gould visited his place in the summers of 1928 and 1929.

"Did you serve her liquor?" asked the attorney.

"Yes—she drank moderately," replied Stanley.

"Yes."

"What did she say to you?"

Stanley testified Mrs. Gould pointed out a man in the place and asked:

"What type of man is he? And how much has he got—what's he good for?"

"Meaning money?" prompted Morris.

"Yes. I told her that it all depended how drunk the man was. Then Mrs. Gould asked me if I had any more customers like him. I said I had many customers with money and good standing.

"She said to me: 'I'll take care of you if you introduce me to some of them.'"

"Did she say how she would take care of you?" asked Morris.

Surprise Move

Prince's sudden termination of his case was a surprise move. Morris and he are counsel for Elwood Kemp, Jr., and Gerard Luisi, a private detective.

The third defendant, Norman J. Gould, brother of Mrs. Gould's husband, Edward, was then placed on the witness stand.

Mrs. Gould, who asked $500,000 damages for the alleged conspiracy, fiddled with her lorgnette during the proceedings; sometimes she even looked through it.

The first witness today was Dr. Perry M. Liebtenstein, an authority on narcotics. He was led over his testimony of yesterday, when he declared that Gerguson had smuggled a drug in Mrs. Gould's demitasse, the coffee would have neutralized its effect.

Mrs. Gould accuses the "prince" of having thus treated her coffee, and then taking her, unconscious, to his apartment where a raiding party burst in on them.

MRS. WEDGER Dies at 102

Mrs. Abbie M. Wedger, 102 years, for the past seven years a patient at the convalescent home at No. 399 Newtonville avenue, Newton, died early today following illness of several months.

Mrs. Wedger was born in Lexington, Me., August 19, 1832, and after being graduated from Gorham Seminary came to Massachusetts.

She is survived by a son, Walter E. Wedger, former state chemist, who for a number of years was attached to the public safety department.

'Prince' Fails to Face Her

Walsh Grins as Jury Visits Slaying Scene

Calmly puffing on a pipe and occasionally laughing, Edmund J. Walsh, of Stoneham, today stood on the spot in Malden where he is accused of having shot and killed Patrolman Isaiah T. "Pete" McLain.

At the request of his counsel, William R. Scharton, he was allowed to accompany judge and jury to the scene.

The case is being heard before Judge Nelson P. Brown in Middlesex court, East Cambridge.

A motion to visit the scene in Fellaway East, Malden, was made by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop.

When it was granted, his assistant, Edward J. Bushell, made a brief opening statement of the murder charge against Walsh, describing his alleged flight through Pleasant street and the Fellaway.

The prisoner's wife, Mrs. Alice Crosby Walsh, was in the courtroom, despite his expressed desire that she be spared the ordeals of the trial. However, when the jury climbed into automobiles for the visit to Malden, she remained behind.

Outlines Case

On the return to the courtroom, Bushnell charged Walsh with first degree murder.

He promised that the government would call to the witness stand a man, who on the afternoon of last November 12, recognized Walsh as the man who had held him up a week earlier.

Driving up alongside Walsh, Bushell said, the three men stepped out and the patrolman began to question him.

"That's the fellow who held me up a week ago. Frisk him. He's got a gun," Bushell quoted his witness.

To this Scharton objected. Judge Brown said that he would take the objection under advisement.

Warning the jury not to regard any statements made by the prosecutor in this light, he adjourned court until later in the afternoon.

May Halt Riel Search

Police to Decide on "Definite Steps"

Worcester, March 6—To decide "definite steps toward solution" or abandon the search, a conference of state detectives, county officials and police was called today in the case of the missing Rita Riel.

District Attorney Owen A. Hoban said that the conference must decide one way or another whether or not it is advisable to still seek the 23-year-old former student of State Teachers' College, who disappeared November 22.

Those called to the conference included State Detectives Michael Barrett and Joseph Ferrari, especially assigned from the State House. State Detective Edward J. McCarthy of this district and Sergeants John Horgan and Joseph Crescio of the state police.

Zottoli Holds 4 In Contempt

Favors Bankers in $1,000,000 Suit

As it stood today, the now-famed aftermath of the million-dollar Lennox & Briggs suit in municipal court left Professor Frank L. Simpson, as well as three other attorneys, under fire for alleged contempt of court.

Professor Simpson, chairman of the Crime commission, was preparing the case he must make Friday in Judge Joseph T. Zottoli's court to show cause why he should not be held in contempt.

He was originally counsel for the other three attorneys.

And Judge Zottoli had under consideration defenses put in by three other lawyers who originally filed a motion for a mistrial on grounds that the judge had prematurely notified defendants in the $1,000,000 suit of his findings.

The court disposed of the suit itself in favor of the defendant banks and bankers sued by the Lennox & Briggs Leather Company.

Judge Zottoli found that "damage to the plaintiff . . . was the result of previous mismanagement and conduct of the officers and directors of the plaintiff company."

BIG GUNS Open Fire ON HUEY

HOPE TO NIP 3D PARTY PLAN

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 6—The blazing bonfire of bitterness and invective which Senator Huey Long and Senator Joe Robinson touched off in the Senate conceals some political firecrackers that have the Democrats secretly worried.

The conservative Democrats have suspected all along that the Louisiana dictator has been planning to put a radical third-party ticket in opposition to President Roosevelt in 1936; that behind the buffoonery and clowning of "the Kingfish" exists a systematic build-up in that direction.

Since yesterday's explosion they are now sure of it.

In either case, the conservative Democrats are apprehensive that by combing all the malcontents, the radicals, the share-the-wealthers, the Townsend planners, the inflationists, et al., Huey might detract enough support from the regular Democratic ticket to cause its defeat.

It has long been accepted in political quarters here that if not an alliance at least an understanding exists between Huey and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest. Huey and Father Coughlin are in frequent communication.

Seen as Menace

There has been a marked change in the general Democratic attitude toward Huey in recent weeks. No longer do the Democrats consider him a clown, a political curiosity. They consider him a deadly menace to the future of the Democratic party.

While personally and politically they hate him, they realize there is just enough plausibility and appeal to his arguments to attract a wide following.

It was the realization that something should be done to arrest Huey's spectacular flights that prompted Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's speech in New York, Monday night, in which he flayed Long and Father Coughlin unmercifully.

McSWEENEY Lauds 5 Police

Lieutenant Louis Di Sessa, Sergeant Leonard T. Banks and Detective William Philbrick will receive three days of added vacation each for arresting two persons in a kidnap and extortion plot.

Sergeant James V. Crowley and Detective Thomas J. Conaty were commended for tracking down a Negro wanted in Virginia for murder.

LOST BOY Police Problem

As nursemaids, Boston police make good policemen.

This was proved today when a three-year-old boy, dressed in overalls, was found in Commercial street in the North End. At the police station, he started to cry.

One after another, 12 patrolmen tried to quiet the youngster. Finally he was given an apple.

The boy stopped crying but made no much noise eating the apple that a vote was taken in favor of the crying.

CAPT. EDDIE RICKENBACKER

The manuscript of this great story of the life of one of our combat pilots was tried out on men who had seen the war for themselves. It was read by noted authors and educators. All acclaimed "Heaven High—Hell Deep" as a masterpiece.

The leading American war ace, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, said:

"You have truly lived the title of your book and brought to young Americans that intimate and innermost feeling of the true effects of the war."

Watch for the opening chapter. It will appear in the Boston Evening American on Tuesday, March 12.

BALMIEST Day of Year MERCURY AT 60

At noon today, the temperature hit 60 degrees, marking the warmest day so far this year, according to Meteorologist G. Harold Noyes at the Federal Building.

This was the highest temperature recorded here since the 65 degrees on December 1, 1934.

Until today, the top for this year was 56 on January 9 and 53 on February 25. The record for March 6 is 70, in 1894.

MATRON FETED On Retirement Eve

Tea was poured today at the Chardon Street home in honor of Miss Catherine Crane, matron. She will be 70 tomorrow and will retire from city service.

Trustees of the home were hists, with Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield guest of honor.

Miss Crane announced that she will not accept the pension to which she is entitled upon retirement.

Can't Steal His Way Into Jail

Jobless Man Tries "Theft," But Is Freed

Edward J. Coughlin, jobless, homeless and despondent, tried to get himself arrested today for a bed and meals.

He turned thief, but the police turned him loose.

Coughlin, who has served jail sentences for small offenses, appeared at the department of correction in the State House this morning and "touched" William H. Shields, parole officer, for the price of coffee and a "flop."

Then he asked to be sent away, and Shields told him that, as his parole had expired, he could not go to jail.

Coughlin went upstairs to the office of the State House News Service and took the hat and coat of a reporter.

Wearing them, he reappeared before Shields and told him he had stolen them. He asked to be arrested.

State police questioned him, then turned him out.

Once before, Coughlin tried the same stunt—with more success. He stole a State House fire extinguisher and was sent away for six months.

90TH ANNUAL STATEMENT

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

A MUTUAL COMPANY FOUNDED IN 1845 INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

To the Policy-holders and the Public:—

On the occasion of the ninetieth annual report of the New York Life, it is fitting to review briefly its record of accomplishment since it began business on April 12, 1845.

Founded when this country was young and sparsely settled, the New York Life has forged steadily ahead, spreading the benefits of its protection over millions of people and contributing, through the investment of its funds, to the Nation's development. Having always been a mutual company, it has declared over one billion dollars in dividends payable to policy-holders. Since 1845 it has met every obligation through every panic, war and epidemic.

During the past year the Company paid or credited $157,000,000 to living policy-holders, and $70,000,000 to the beneficiaries of those who died.

The Company's assets were $2,109,505,224 at the close of 1934, an increase of $98,562,112 over the previous year. The gain in assets during the single year 1934 is greater than the total amount which the Company accumulated in assets during the first forty-four years of its history.

During the year 1934 our investments in Government, State and Municipal Bonds increased $146,918,786. A decrease of $17,000,000 in policy loans and an increase of over $60,000,000 in new insurance issued during the year reflect the general improvement of business in 1934.

The following table shows the diversification of the Company's assets at the end of 1934. All bonds eligible for amortization are carried at their amortized value determined in accordance with the law of the State of New York. All other bonds, including bonds in default, and all guaranteed and preferred stocks, are carried at market value as of December 31, 1934.

ONCE AGAIN THE SAME STORY; "POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL!"

Mrs. H. BRADLEY DAVIDSON, JR...
RETURNING TO THEIR HOME ABOUT 4:30 A.M. MR. and MRS. DAVIDSON HAD AN ARGUMENT AS TO WHO SHOULD PUT THE CAR UP... THEY FINALLY LEFT THE CAR IN FRONT OF THE HOUSE
COTTAGE OCCUPIED BY DAVIDSON AND HIS BRIDE, THE FORMER ELVA STATLER of PINEHURST, N.C.
THE DAVIDSONS WENT TO THEIR SEPARATE ROOMS. DAVIDSON DID NOT KNOW WHETHER HIS WIFE WENT TO BED OR NOT.
DAVIDSON SAYS HE WAS AWAKENED NEXT MORNING BY THE BUTLER WHO SAID, "MY GOD, MR. DAVIDSON, MRS. DAVIDSON IS DEAD!"...
DAVIDSON RUSHED OUT TO THE GARAGE...
HE FOUND HIS WIFE SLUMPED IN THE DOOR OF THE CAR... HE IMMEDIATELY CALLED A DOCTOR.....
H. BRADLEY DAVIDSON, JR.
DAVIDSON PLACED HIS WIFE ON THE REAR SEAT. HE DISCOVERED THE IGNITION WAS ON WHEN HE STARTED TO DRIVE TO THE HOSPITAL...

Is there an "inside story?" Elva Statler Davidson can never tell it. She's dead—at 22, with all her life's seeming promise unfulfilled. Such facts as are known are contained in the testimony given by the husband, H. Bradley Davidson, at a coroner's inquest at Pinehurst, N. C. The sketches illustrate its highlights: A late spaghetti party, a quarrel about parking the car, retirement of the Davidsons to separate rooms, the butler's gruesome discovery, the body in the garage! "Poor little rich girl!"

She "had everything!" Except happiness! Not a new story, but one that never lacks for poignancy! Why couldn't life hold happiness, peace, safety for Elva Statler Davidson? The answer is being sought by a coroner's jury at Pinehurst, N. C., where the young wife was found dead, her half-clad body sprawled partly in, partly out of her luxurious motor car. The artist's sketches outline testimony given by her husband

GARAGE AT THE DAVIDSONS PINEHURST HOME.

In this garage, at Pinehurst, N. C., was found the lifeless body of Mrs. H. Bradley Davidson, the former Elva Statler of Cambridge, heiress to a hotel fortune. She was a Radcliffe alumna, a prominent member of Boston society, and one of New England's foremost young horsewomen. (Sketches by Charles Schmidt, Boston Evening American Staff Artist.)

'TRUTH HIDDEN,' SAYS STATLER PROBER

sports car, early Wednesday following a gay charity ball.

John Notragiacomio, a waiter, told the jury today that Mrs. Davidson was weeping as she ate a late supper with a gay party at a spaghetti camp a few hours before she was found dead in the garage.

"When I started serving spaghetti she was crying," Notragiacomio said. "She took out her handkerchief and wiped her eyes. Tears were profuse."

It was Birch who found Mrs. Davidson slumped half on the running board and half in her car when he opened the garage doors about 9 a. m. and smelled gasoline fumes.

Davidson told the jury yesterday that his wife suffered from insomnia and sometimes took her car and went for a drive when she could not sleep.

He said he observed no signs that his 22-year-old bride was unhappy at the spaghetti camp.

Butler Takes Stand

Birch was recalled to the stand today as the inquest was resumed.

It was Birch discovered the body of the 22-year-old heiress in the Davidson garage last Wednesday.

Yesterday he told of going to the closed garage, smelling fumes when he opened the door, and then finding Mrs. Davidson's body.

Society folk of the winter resort set and villagers mingled in the little hall of the Pinehurst Community House today, most of the inquest.

The hall, with seats for only 50, was filled. All standing room was taken and outside many waited to get in.

Birch was obviously nervous as Solicitor Pruette began questioning him.

The solicitor asked first about the car Birch used the morning of February 27 when he went uptown for the mail.

Q—Whose car did you use? A—My own car.

Q—Where did you keep it? A—In the back yard.

Q—That was near the garage? A—Not so close.

Q—Did Mrs. Davidson take automobile drives at night? A—Yes, she has, she did just before Christmas one night.

Birch added that he "didn't know whether she went for a drive at night since they were married."

Saw Her Crying

Q—Have you ever heard the Davidsons quarrel? A—I never heard them have cross words.

Q—Haven't you made the statement that Mrs. Davidson could not have fallen in the position you found her lying? A—I have. She might have crawled into that position.

Q—Isn't it true that Mr. and Mrs. Davidson had a quarrel before leaving for the party Tuesday night? A—Not that I know of, no sir.

Birch said he carried the key to the garage and was in it Tuesday but didn't lock the door. He added:

"The door has a handle that locks when you turn it and you have to have a key to open it."

Birch then left the stand.

Davidson came in... the inquiry room while Birch was on the stand. He was with Curtis Campaigne of Montclair, N. J., who, with Mrs. Campaigne, was a house guest of the Davidsons at the time of Mrs. Davidson's death.

John Notragiacomio, a bushy-haired waiter at Montesanti's spaghetti camp, was then called. He said he knew both the Davidsons well.

He was nattily attired in a blue coat and tweed trousers, and calmly answered the questions of Pruette.

The solicitor asked about the arrival of the party of 18 persons.

"They came in and sat around the fireplace in the dining room while the meal was being prepared," the waiter said.

Q—Does Montesanti's have a bar? A—Not a regular bar.

"I understand, it couldn't be in North Carolina," Pruette said and the spectators laughed.

Q—Did you serve anything to drink? A—Some wine, three bottles of claret. Someone had some whiskey in a pint bottle.

Party Not "Dry"

Q—Did you notice anything about Mrs. Davidson's behavior that night? A—When I started serving spaghetti she was crying. She took out her handkerchief and wiped her eyes. Tears were profuse. Mrs. Herbert Vail (of Southern Pines) went over to her.

He said she cried for some time. He didn't know how long.

"There were no other guests there. The party broke up around 5 o'clock," Notragiacomio said. "Mrs. Davidson was talking to Mr. Vail just before they left."

Q—Did you see anything to suggest that Mrs. Davidson was in an unhappy or despondent frame of mind? A—I did not. No members of the party were perceptibly under the influence of whiskey at the party.

Q—It was a dry and dull party, then? A—"Except for the accordion player's numbers," Hyde said with a dry smile, and the spectators again laughed.

Bernard Freeman, Pinehurst newspaperman, who attended both the ball and the spaghetti party, was next to testify.

"There was no drinking whiskey at Montesanti's," Freeman said. "There was no place to purchase it and you had to bring your own."

Hyannis Girl Heard

Jane McMullen of Hyannisport, Mass., and Pinehurst, was the next witness. She was wearing a brown sports outfit and said she was on both parties.

"Mrs. Davidson's expression while crying at the Goble made me feel she was fairly morbid and depressed," she said.

"She would stop crying and then start all over again. She wasn't crying until we sat down at the table."

"Was there any liquor at Montesanti's?" asked Pruette.

As he questioned her, he puffed on a cigarette and tilted back in a chair.

"There wasn't any more liquor," she said. "They had had a couple of drinks before—that is those we went to the party with."

She said she didn't notice Mrs. Davidson weeping or unhappy.

Following Miss Isabelle McMullen was John Reinecke, of Carthage, whose testimony was brief. He said he paid no particular attention to Mrs. Davidson at the party.

"I heard her request the accordion player to repeat one number," he said.

Freeman was recalled and testified he heard Mrs. Davidson say:

"I'm going to get tight," at a party that night.

Freeman said he saw her drink only wine, but that there was a highball in front of her on the table.

Turner said those on the party had a "good time," but it was not a "boisterous" occasion. He had paid no especial attention to Mrs. Davidson, he said.

Legion Head for "Oath"

Urges Passage of Teacher Bill

Full approval of the bill now pending before the Legislature requiring all teachers in the commonwealth to swear allegiance to the state and federal Constitutions, was voiced today by Jeremiah Twoomey, state commander of the American Legion.

Twoomey said:

"One of the principle teachings of the American Legion is the upholding of the Constitution of the United States. Every member of the American Legion has pledged his allegiance to uphold the Constitution of both his state and country.

Jeremiah Twoomey

"It is hard for me to understand why certain persons and organizations should object to teachers, instructors and professors in the state of Massachusetts pledging their full support to uphold the Constitution.

"Why should they be classed as different?

"Fathers who went to war 18 years ago now have little children in school. Do they want their children taught anything that even hints at un-Americanism?

"They do not. They fought for the flag. They want their children and other children to be taught to respect it and appreciate the government that is behind it.

"Every real American father and mother in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should urge their representatives to support the bill."

The body of a man recovered early today in the Malden river was identified by his wife in Malden as John J. Mahoney, 58, of Medford street, Malden.

Miss Beatrice Seckendorff, 40, of 214 Riverway, Back Bay, was badly burned about the neck, arms, and face, early today when a stove exploded in her suite.

Miss Seckendorff was getting breakfast and she applied a match to the burners. Without any warning the stove exploded, knocking the panel out of the door leading to her apartment and smashing three windows in the house.

Miss Seckendorff was thrown to the floor.

The explosion aroused 60 families in the big apartment block. An alarm was sounded and firemen found Miss Seckendorff unconscious. Dr. Hugh Eversole, of same address gave first aid and then ordered her removed to Deaconess Hospital.

OFFICER SNYDER Aided by Blood

After three blood transfusions from fellow-officers, Patrolman Joseph Snyder of the Metropolitan police who was crushed between two automobiles last night, was reported improving today in Massachusetts General Hospital.

Snyder stopped an auto driven by William D. Purcell of Fitchburg on Charles River Dam road and was talking to Purcell about defective lights when another machine, operated by Stephen H. Bishop of Newton, crashed into him.

BOOK BARRAGE Traps Bandits

New York, March 6 (INS)—Three young bandits were captured today because their victim threw office ledgers at them from a second-story window.

Arthur Blank, head of the Consolidated Home Equipment Co., failed to hit the three youths who were fleeing with $1000 of his money. But the racket caused by the deluge of heavy ledgers onto the crowded sidewalk attracted the police.

Greek Rebels Face Trap

Many Believed Slain in Struma Battle

Villefranche, France, March 6 (INS)—Two French cruisers, the Tourville and the Foch, will leave here for Greece immediately, it was stated today.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Athens, March 6—Three loyal divisions of the Greek army, advancing from three directions, drove forward today in an effort to "liquidate" the rebel forces fighting in Salonika with their back to the Aegean Sea.

Government troops under General George Kondylis, minister of war, poured into the valley of the Struma, attacking the rebels from the west. General Ioannides led a division from the northwest and a division under General Gialystras bore down from the north.

The government troops were reported inspired by their success in driving the revolutionists out of Seres, which is 45 miles northeast of Salonika.

How many rebel and loyalist troops were slain was not immediately ascertained. The government announcement that a terrific artillery bombardment drove the insurgents from their positions indicating the casualties may have been heavy.

This Is Life

ROBERT E ROGERS

In the somewhat startling new book by Dr. Hans Zinsser called "Rats, Lice and History," a biography of the disease known as typhus, the author exhibits himself as an inconoclast in reference to many of the notions held by laymen about science and disease and the men who deal with both.

For instance, he protests strongly against the modern tendency to idealize scientists, to impute to them the noblest of motives in pursuing their work, to ascribe to them, as a matter of fact, the other worldly motives of voluntary martyrs for religion and the faith. Dr. Zinsser jibes violently at this.

"A great deal of sentimental rot has been written about this totally erroneous assumption. When a bacteriologist dies, as other people do—of incidental dissipation, accident or old age—devotion and self sacrifice are themes of the minister's eulogy. Let them succumb in the course of his work—as an engineer falls down a hole or a lawyer is shot by his client—he is consecrated as a martyr. If an epidemiologist on a plague study talked and behaved in the manner of the hero of "Arrowsmith" he would not only be useless but he would be regarded as something of a yellow ass and a nuisance by his associates."

Well, I don't know.

I suppose that the hard-boiled Menckenese style is the outer and visible form of an inward and unspiritual protest, an attempt to make it plain that the worker in medicine is moved by no higher ethical ideals than workers in other professions—a typical modern attitude. The attack on Sinclair Lewis is incidental and unimportant.

Emotions, Ideals

It is Lewis's business as a novelist to put ove. in articulate prose dialogue those emotions and ideals on the part of the scientist which in real life he probably expresses in grunts, completion, profanity and loud laments that he ever chose such a cussed life work.

Yet only Dr. Zinsser cannot prove that the ideal which Lewis makes articulate, perhaps sentimentally so, is altogether lacking. Even if a hard-boiled bacteriologist may deny such emotions in himself—deny them thrice before the cock crows—they may, nevertheless, exist.

As for the minister, that is a more serious subject. Zinsser implies he is a feeble-minded traditionalist, reading into the situation significances which do not exist. But, after all! If a man goes on burning himself to death with an X-ray, exposing himself deliberately to the results of playing with bacteria—say, of spotted fever—and the like, I submit that his motives may be not necessarily purely hard-boiled.

He may, it is true, desire only a better job or a higher salary, or a medal, or a reputation, or even some quite utilitarian knowledge.

He may, equally, be motivated by something not so unlike the motive of him whom we call a martyr—the salvation of mankind or the glory of God.

Dr. Zinsser doesn't know. The person in question might deny it hotly because that is the fashion of today. But you can seldom trust a man to tell the truth about himself.

Minister's Job

Let us say simply that it is the scientist's job to die in the line of duty. Then it is equally the minister's job to ascribe that death to motives which will serve to encourage and uplift the man in the street.

The man in the street is only too ready to ascribe motives of mere self interest to any deed. Most deeds of most professions will not endure scrutiny, as the man in the street knows.

Yet he can't be allowed to starve to death without any nourishment of idealism.

The minister finds few enough examples he can use. Therefore, when he happens upon some death or accident in line of duty which will bear this heavy weight of the self-sacrificing martyr motive, it is the minister's duty to rush it in, for the good of the human race, no matter how much the surviving hard-boiled and selfish scientists may gag and retch at such infantilism.

Faith and idealism, even if they be the size of a grain of mustard seed, may have extraordinary psychological possibilities.

Even "Arrowsmith" may have sowed a good seed or two.

One night recently a young man of 19 hopped aboard a freight car rattling out of the railroad yards in St. Paul, Minn. Under his arm, as he settled himself in the draughty car, was a violin case.

The freight rain rumbled through the winter night. Its headlight, stabbing the dark, pointed south and east—toward New York.

The dreams of its youthful passenger were pointing toward New York too—New York and the big broadcasting studio in Radio City where Fred Allen's "Town Hall Amateur Hour" goes out over the air waves.

On Wednesday evening, February 20, those dreams came true. The boy with the violin, George Rosen of St. Paul—was awarded first prize on Allen's Amateur Hour. And last week he was playing a featured spot at the Roxy. More such aspirations may be crystalized tonight (WEEI) as Fred welcomes more fledglings up to opportunity's gate.

TOWNSEND
Plan Blocked, FOES BELIEVE

By Associated Press

Washington, March 6—The Townsend pension plan, Democratic leaders said today with obvious relief, is dead for this session of Congress.

Although reluctant to speak publicly, they pointed to the fact that only 30 signatures had been obtained so far on a House petition to force a vote on the $200-a-month pension bill.

The 30 were affixed in the first two days after the presentation of the petition, but 218 are necessary.

Friends of the legislation insisted that eventually it will be adopted.

Administration chieftains, conscious of the mail urging congressional approval, had acknowledged some concern lest they be forced to grapple openly with the Townsend drive.

Rep. John S. McGroarty, California's poet laureate, whose name is on the legislation, conceded the start had been "slow," but said he looked for new support from New England and the South where he asserted the Townsend movement was spreading rapidly.

Hitler Snub to Britain Bared

White Book Blow to Germany Resented

By Associated Press

Berlin, March 6—German officials admitted today the British white book on German armaments, rather than the throat trouble of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, was the guiding influence behind Berlin's postponement of Sir John Simon's visit.

They made little effort today to conceal the fact that the Fuehrer's cold is more diplomatic than real.

Sir John, British foreign secretary, was to come to Berlin tomorrow to discuss European peace problems with Hitler.

"It was blow for blow," one official said. "The white book was a blow for us and we replied with another blow."

The Foreign Office said the negotiations growing out of the Anglo-French talks in London are definitely off, "and it is impossible to foresee when they will recommence"

Hitler was working as usual today and was not confined to his apartments. The propaganda ministry said "his indisposition is very slight."

Britishers Laugh at Hitler's "Cold"

By Associated Press

London, March 6—Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today that the government was in communication with Berlin regarding a new date for his conference with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

During his explanation of the postponement of his trip to Berlin, Sir John was interrupted by opposition members who broke into laughter when he mentioned Hitler's cold.

Sir John asserted Britain would not "change its white paper in which Germany's rearmament was criticized.

3 DETECTIVES

Three police officers attached to the detective bureau today won three days' extra vacation as a result of the first commendation issued by Police Commissioner McGrath.

TUNNEL TOLL
Receipts Increase

Tolls taken at the Sumner traffic tunnel last week were greater than in any week since it was opened, Mayor Mansfield announced today.

For the week of February 25 the revenue was $13,250.50. This was still a deficit of $8,729.50 for the week, however, based on costs. In the 33 weeks of operation, the tunnel has piled up a total deficit of $400,329.90, but revenue since the first week has reduced, Jan. 13, shows a 40 per cent increase.

SOVIET DOCTRINE PUSHED IN FILMS

The multi-armed octopus in Moscow has many of its colossal death-dealing tentacles wound around America.

It silently reaches for a strangle-hold on our universities, our industries, our public schools, our labor organizations and our national and state legislative bodies.

Its avowed purpose is the complete annihilation of the United States of America and its democratic institutions and the substitution of personal liberty, and, finally, as a matter of course, THE TRANSFERENCE OF THE NATIONAL LAW-MAKING BODY FROM WASHINGTON TO MOSCOW.

Incredible Facts

THE STARTLING AND INCREDIBLE FACTS REVEALED SHOULD IMMEDIATELY BE LAID BEFORE CONGRESS.

The freedom, rapidity and subtlety with which these enemies of our institutions work ought to BRING America to its feet—before America is KNOCKED OFF OF ITS FEET!

These pictures—and every picture that comes out of Russia is pro-Communist and anti-democratic—play to weekly audiences of NINE HUNDRED AND TWENTY THOUSAND PERSONS.

Films Controlled

The Moscow government CONTROLS all of these 152 American theaters through the AMKINO CORPORATION, of 723 Seventh avenue, New York city.

They have acquired in the interests of the Stalin-Amkino revolutionary outfit, theaters in which to show their films in Baltimore, Boston, Washington and Chicago.

Admit Propaganda

The Amkino people admit with a what-are-you-going-to-do-about-it swagger that these Russian films are propaganda.

Mark Aberson, the Hollywood representatives of Amkino, says they - a now about "to concentrate on the intellectuals" in America. The inference being that the plain garden variety of citizen is in the bag.

For 1935 the Moscow slave-staters, through Amkino, will send us 15 sound pictures—"made for America." They have exhibited 62 pictures in three years, and "the record shows says the Motion Picture Herald, "LITTLE OR NO OPPOSITION, OFFICIAL OR OTHERWISE, TO THE PRESENTATION OF SOVIET MOTION PICTURES."

Strict censorship—often in trivial matters—over our American pictures, but ABSOLUTE FREEDOM FOR FOREIGN REVOLUTIONARY PROPAGANDA FILMS!

One of the tricks of the Kremlin-Amkino gang is to exhibit a perfectly innocuous picture once in a while as a smoke-screen for its heavy gun product, like "Shams," "Diary of a Revolutionist," "The Five-Year Plan," "Enemies of Progress," "In the Land of the Soviets," "Three Songs About Lenin," etc., etc., in which the camera performs all the lying tricks about life in Russia that the baby-starving politburo has taught it.

A picture now in production in Moscow and destined for our naive eyes is "Soviet Russia," the cast including such rugged proletarians as Joe Stalin and his confidential killers and such militaristic-imperialistic comrades as President Kalinin and the commissar of defense.

The octopus is even holding a "Soviet Jubilee" in the United States!

It commemorates the 15th anniversary of the Russian motion picture industry. During the jubilee there will be shown to a vast number of Americans everything EXCEPT pictures of the state-ordered starvation of the millions of peasant farmers who refused to be collectivized, the torture chambers of the cheka and the OGPU, the czar-like massacre of 126 Russians after the assassination of Kirov, the abject beggary of millions of "blessed proletarians," the eternal procession to Siberia of the "class traitors," the militarization of children, and the perpetual spying of sons on fathers and brothers on sisters.

There is at present a "Soviet kinema festival" in Moscow.

Of all the seventeen pictures selected to be shown at this exhibition there is NOT ONE THAT CONCEIVABLY ANYTHING THAT IS DIRECTLY FAVORABLE TO AMERICA. They are all sex pictures or musical comedies, with one exception. And that exception is a pink propaganda picture based on the depression.

While Russia is allowed to go on trying to communize us, she has erected an insurmountable barrier against our own picture product.

ONLY FIVE PER CENT OF THE HOLLYWOOD PRODUCT IS PERMITTED IN RUSSIA—AND AMONG THEM NO PICTURES THAT SHOW AMERICA IN A FAVORABLE LIGHT.

Throwing our product under the bridge, the Amkino officials braggingly state that they have operated profitably every year in America except in 1933.

THIS IS THE ATTITUDE OF A COUNTRY THAT WANTS "TO TRADE WITH US," AND THAT CRINGED AND CRAWLED AND KOWTOWED FOR BOOTS FOR RECOGNITION.

Without let or hindrance on the part of our Congress or our people, the enemies of freedom, wealth and private property, these barbarians, reactionaries, fanatics and successors of the fadistic and lunatic czars are permitted to shout their ravings and exhibit their insanities before 90 million Americans a year on the screen!

HOW LONG, O AMERICA, ARE YOU GOING TO ALLOW THESE BABY-STARVERS, DECADENT DEGENERATES AND JACK-H E-RIPPERS TO SPIT IN YOUR COMPLACENT AND GOOD-NATURED FACE?

"Loyal citizens of America write your Congressmen, write your Senators. Let them ask them how long they are going to neglect their obvious duty."

Hasty Pudding Club Plans Annual Show

By BETTY ALDEN

BOSTON WILL SOON have an opportunity to judge for itself as to whether the Vincent Club or the Hasty Pudding Club can produce the best amateur show . . . No sooner will the wholly feminine Vincent Ventures have folded up its properties and become a pleasant memory than the Crimson's ancient club will present its annual spring revue . . .

ARTHUR M. JONES, JR.

The simultaneous advent of Spring and the D'Oyly Carte Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company was a combination almost certain to leave a lasting mark on the environs of this staid city . . . First result of this double blessing has been the creation at the ancient Hasty Pudding Club of the masterpiece extraordinary and musical extravaganza superb . . . "Foemen of the Yard" . . .

* * *

Short Tour Planned

THIS THEATRICAL travesty, with a book and a cast that promise to carry it to a new high peak among dramatic ventures, will open in its mother city, Cambridge, on March 27 . . . at the Pudding Clubhouse . . . it will continue there for two days before moving into Boston for a single performance at the Repertory Theater on the 30th . . .

Then it will take to the open road to give the Atlantic coastline as far south as Baltimore a chance to see this latest and greatest of Pudding Shows . . .

Tentatively it will go on to Providence on All Fools Day . . . then away out across the rolling Pennsylvania hills to the smoky city of Pittsburgh for a single performance on April 3 . . . Then down to the sunny city of Baltimore on the 4th before leading Northward again for the climax of the season . . . a performance on Broadway on April 5 . . .

The cast that will stage this stupendous production will be headed by such veteran favorites as Barrett Wendell 3rd, tap dancer extraordinary . . . John F. Ducey, Jr., and Walter Birge, famous for their feminine impersonations . . . and a host of such prominent newcomers as Gaspar G. Bacon, Jr., George Whitney, Jr., Anderson Page, Robert H. Gardiner, Jr., Robert Grinnell and Henry Lyman . . .

Others in the show will be the veteran pair, Lawrence Von B. Nichols and Francis E. Johnson . . . Also Donald Baker, Robinson F. Barker, H. Francis DeLone, Charles S. Bellows, Pierre Fraley, Guy Garland, Charles S. Houston, William M. Hunt, 2nd, Peter Jopling, Howard C. Kellogg, John La Farge, William Minot, Jr., John G. Rogers, Harry F. Stimson, Jr., Arthur B. Sturges, Arnett McKennan and Myron Wick . . .

THE BOOK FOR THIS MASTERPIECE is the work of Arthur M. Jones, Jr., '35, who will also take a part in the show . . . . For the music the Pudding has again called upon Francis D. Moore, '35, former president of the Lampoon and co-composer of the 1934 score, who has been assisted by Camman Newbury, '37 . . .

The plot of "Foemen of the Yard" concerns itself chiefly with the progress of democracy at Harvard . . . To assure the popularity of the Dean with the greatest number of those connected with the college, an annual election has replaced the time-honored method of direct appointment . . . the franchise has been extended to all students, instructors, and their wives, and employes of the University . . .

In this little cockpit of the stage behold the two mighty combatants, "the Foemen of the Yard" each striving to win the coveted position . . . Springing from this soil of changing patterns, behold a beautiful love blossoming into maturity . . . and over all the dreaded underworld casts the enveloping pall of its sinister influence, involving high and low in its evil toils . . .

Bowery Plans

Ball to Benefit Home for Aged

THE COMMITTEE, headed by Miss Ellen Gray, which is planning the Bowery Ball for the benefit of the Mount Pleasant Home for Aged men and Women, met yesterday at the Newbury street home of Miss Kathleen Moran.

Several novel features have been proposed for the dance, which is to be held at the Hotel Vendome on the evening of Monday, March 18.

Eight young ladies whose masked pictures will appear in the papers, and whose identity will remain a mystery from now until the time of the ball, will be auctioned off at the fatal hour of midnight, and the fortunate purchasers will have the honor of eating supper with the damosels which they bid-in.

Miss Leslie Blake will dance a Bowery dance against a novelty background and there are other features which will be announced later. Dress will be optional.

As Mrs. John Moran is on a visit to New York, Mrs. Howard Gray, Ellen's mother, acted as hostess to the committee members. Mrs. Gray was wearing a black street dress.

Some of the committee members were unable to attend as they were rehearsing for the Vincent Club show, among those who did attend were Miss Roberta Hastings, in a vivid green suit trimmed with mink tails; Miss Ellen Grey, the committee chairman, in a brown dress Peter Pan white collar and cuffs, and Miss Frances Shae in a black and white street dress. Black was the predominant color of the gathering.

Miss Kathleen Moran wore black wool. The severity of Miss Eleanor Swift's black dress was relieved by a Chinese red color, and she wore a small black turban.

Mrs. George U. Baylies, of society's young married set, is frequently called upon to do her bit by ushering and serving as a hostess at important social affairs. She is the former Jacquelyn Hartford.

A STORY OF REAL ESTATE GOLD

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

THE GOLDEN EARTH—By Arthur Pound—Macmillan.

Those who pin their economic faith on the value of real estate will revel in this story of Manhattan's landed wealth.

Every one of the $24 that the Dutch paid to the Indians for that narrow strip between the Hudson and the East Rivers and the Battery and Spuyten Duyvel must be at least a billion now.

Mr. Pound has done a masterly piece of work in tracing the island's development. The story of how its natural hills were levelled off and its man-made mountains of stone and steel raised into the clouds is a fascinating one.

Even more fascinating is the story of the magnetism of Manhattan that has drawn to it gold from all the quarters of the globe, making it the reservoir of wealth that it is.

Recent Books I Have Liked

To learn just what Boston is reading, a half dozen persons, selected at random, were asked what book they enjoyed most during the last few weeks. The answers:

JOHN E. QUINN, Cambridge, chairman licensing commission: "Wild Pastures," Rex Beach (Farrar and Rinehart).

More of Boston's literary "likes" will be published next Wednesday.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Surfeit of Love Never Highly Valued

"WHERE he is concerned, I haven't a scrap of pride. Once he cared for me, but now he turns me down cruelly, brutally; cuts me short on the telephone. I could understand it I ever did anything mean to him, but I've never given him anything but my deepest love."

The above is an extract from a letter written by a distracted girl who can't understand why the young man hangs up the phone when he recognizes her voice.

She finds it hard to believe that he's utterly surfeited with her cloying devotion. She's hurt to the quick when someone tells her he has spoken of her as a "telephone hound."

She has never heard, poor child, the old adage that if a girl throws herself at a man's head, she's likely to find herself at his feet.

Men who are run after and written and telephoned to when they are plainly bored by these attentions, have the feeling of hunted creatures, and a hunted thing fights desperately to escape.

"Deepest love," such as this girl says she has always given this young man, palls if you make a steady diet of it. The cheap, salted peanut never tastes so good as when you've worked your way through a large box of "somebody's best" candy.

My correspondent has asked me not to give her letter in full, as she fears it will be recognized, but it will not be breaking faith to say that "petting" and hand-holding appear to have been the special ies of this affair, from first to last. Indeed, I'm afraid there was very little else. So the young man got tired of the too easy kisses and now hangs up the telephone when he recognizes the girl's voice.

Strange to say, even that cruel insult does not seem to be able to cure her of her infatuation, and she writes me this ten-page letter to ask how she can win him back.

Alas, there is no magic formula for "winning them back." But there is a magic formula that may be invoked for keeping them, and that is—don't be cheap. Bargains in affection, like bargains on the marked-down counter, are open to suspicion. What is worth while is not to be had by cheap and easy methods.

I know that manners, customs, even morals, have changed in the last generation, but there is something innate in human nature that turns from what is cheap and easy to the thing that is more difficult to acquire.

Think this over, all you girls who let men break dates without explanation or apology; who ring up your boy friends on the telephone in and out of season, and then want to know how you can "win him back." It just can't be done!

If you allow yourself to be picked up, taken for motor rides by strange young men, or crash an acquaintance without an introduction, don't be surprised if the young man drops you and gets tired of his "bargain counter" playmate. It's the case of "easy-come, easy-go" so there's no use crying about it.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We fell in love at first sight. I a 20 and she is 17 and a senior in high school and will graduate in June. I have been working for the past two years and am making very good wages.

I suggested to her that we have dates only once a week, because I did not want to interfere with her studies. You see, we are a good deal alike. Neither of us smokes or drinks, nor do we indulge in heavy petting, and we get along swell.

I wonder if it would be best to ask her before or after she graduates, whether she would like to marry me.

UNDECIDED.

As you were so thoughtful to suggest seeing this young lady only once a week, so as not to interfere with her studies, don't you think it would be well to exercise the same restraint about proposing?

The last few months before graduation a student has to concentrate on his studies, and if you pile on top of that the question of whether to become engaged or not engaged, you would be making things more difficult. Wait until she gets her diploma, by all means, is my suggestion.

Music and Love

A BEAUTIFUL DAY, a beautiful scene. Little Cupid is playing his love song, joyously. The small bird is singing, the sun is bright, the water blue. The young man is asking "How SOON? I will not WAIT."

This lovely picture, by NELL BRINKLEY, asks as plainly as can be, and I ask YOU, and every unmarried reader, WHY DON'T YOU GET MARRIED? BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A BRIGHTER LIVING-ROOM

MAKE GAY NEW CURTAINS FOR SUMMER

Spring—and eyes look eagerly outdoors!

Windows become the focus of attention. It's time to put up fresh, new curtains—the gay, simple kind that are so quickly and easily made.

An inexpensive material that's light-weight will be just the thing. Say cotton voile, cheesecloth, organdie, Argentine cloth, or any open material.

Fun to Make Them

You'll want them French-pleated — for a smart, tailored look—as shown in our sketch. First, to get the length of your curtains, measure from top to bottom of window trim. Add 8 inches for a heading, 8 inches for a hem, and something for shrinkage. Next, stitch side hems—1½ inches wide. Then turn down 4 inches at the top—twice, for a heading of triple thickness, as in diagram A. Stitch down this heading. (In crisp organdie or glistening Argentine cloth the heading stands up by itself. Cotton voile and cheesecloth need extra thicknesses of material for stiffening).

To make 4 French pleats, measure in 3 inches from each side and place a pin, which will mark the center of each of the two outside French pleats. Divide the material between the 2 pins into 3 equal parts so that you have on each curtain 4 pins with equal spaces between. At each pin make a 2-inch pleat as in diagram B.

Stitch each pleat the depth of the heading. Next, divide each pleat into thirds, to look like 3 pleats, as in diagram C. Catch these 3 pleats together lightly at the top, but at the bottom of the heading tack them securely. Sew rings on the back, as in diagram D.

A New Booklet

There—your curtains are finished! They'll win many compliments. And so will all the other accessories in our new booklet, HAND-MADE . . . FOR THE LIVING-ROOM. Here are some of the subjects:

Slip Covers Draperies Valances
Glass Curtains
Sofa Pillows Footstools
Lamp Shades and Shields

Useless Trumps

It is one of the grandest feelings in the world to play a doubled contract at bridge and have the opponents discard their trumps helplessly.

South	West	North	East
1♠	2◇ (1)	2♡	Pass
2NT (2)	3♣	3♠ (3)	Pass
4♠ (4)	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) West dares not make a takeout double. His top card strength is not sufficient to risk a penalty pass by East, a contingency which West's spade void makes quite likely.
(2) With a free bid from North and two stoppers in the adverse suit, the South player is justified in bidding two notrump.
(3) A trifle optimistic because of the barren distribution.

West opened the King of clubs and shifted to the Queen of diamonds. Declarer won with the King and returned a small club. West bravely ducked and East won with the Queen. A hurried trump return was taken by dummy's Jack. A diamond was led to the Ace and a club ruffed with the trey. The Ace and King of hearts were cashed and a small heart returned.

The last club was ruffed with dummy's King and East was obliged to underruff. Another heart was returned from dummy, and once again East helplessly played a trump while declarer overruffed.

The Ace of hearts won the tenth trick and declarer conceded the last diamond. A well planned cross-ruff had made a very difficult contract.

The contract could have been defeated at double dummy had West permitted East to win both club tricks and lead trumps each time.

Shirred Yoke

PATTERN 9304

If you're young, lithe and ambitious, here's your frock!

Even if you're not so young, it's still your frock.

You can take to tucks beneath the yoke, or to several rows of shirring—either will give a nice fullness at the bust, and the shapeliness so much stressed this season is further increased by means of the oval beltline, under which the bodice is softly gathered.

Wear the collar open or closed—take to a tailored hat, preferably of felt, and go your way in chic!

Skin Food As Foundation

Rich Cream Flavored by Miss Landi

By JULIET SHELBY

VERSATILE Elissa Landi—screen star, successful author of four published novels, trained as an opera singer, once destined for fame as a member of the Russian ballet, a daring horsewoman, and one of Hollywood's best cooks! "How on earth does she find time for all those occupations?" you ask.

And that is what I wondered so I asked her.

Elissa Landi believes in a healthy, normal life. She keeps good sleeping hours and is up out of bed long before you even know it is daylight. Without health, she cannot accomplish all she desires, so her health is of prime importance.

She doesn't allow her skin to become blemished through fatigue or dried out from exposure—she always takes the necessary precautions to keep her skin youthfully clear and sparkling with her unusual vitality.

And for a thorough cleansing, she scrubs it with soap and a brush. The cream she uses is a skin food, one that leaves the texture soft and velvety—a perfect foundation for the little makeup she uses.

If you have a skin that tends toward dryness, or one that is irritated by the slightest breeze or strong sun ray, you, too, should use such a foundation. Let me give you the name of one favored by Elissa Landi—it is not expensive and it is so cooling and refreshing when applied to the skin that it is a joy to use.

Wipe off any surplus before applying your makeup—just a thin film will give your skin all the protection and soothing it requires. It nourishes without fattening and its very name inspires devotion.

If you wish to learn the name of this skin food, phone Liberty 4000, and ask for Juliet Shelby, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Use of PUMICE On Teeth

Question: How can I remove an accumulation of tartar from my teeth. I visit a dentist twice a year, but nevertheless my teeth get yellow and discolored in a very short time.

Ruth W. W., Nashua, N. H.

Answer: Cleansing the teeth once a month with powdered pumice will do much to prevent the accumulation of tartar. It will also help to keep them white and sound. To give this treatment properly a wooden stick like those used on the nails is necessary, and five cents' worth of powdered pumice. A bit of absorbent cotton improves the application, and a few drops of lemon juice are better than water. This must not be applied more frequently than once a month.

HERE'S A Treaty ALL THEIR OWN

England's latest treaty has no signature on it but its own.

They call it the White Paper. It calls for more army, more navy and more airplanes. England is taking no chances of being folded on the dotted line.

It is 17 years since the war ended and it seems like yesterday.

In a few more months it will seem like tomorrow.

MEDFORD WOMAN

Read what Mrs. W. P. McEachen of 16 Rockwood Terrace says:

Here's her letter

"How I used to dread washday! It was such a long job getting the wash nice and white. Now I get clothes 4 or 5 shades whiter—with none of the drudgery I used to dread so. For Rinso soaks out dirt—saves scrubbing. The clothes come so sweet and clean, I don't even boil them. And Rinso saves me money, too—for now the clothes aren't scrubbed threadbare in a few months. I use Rinso for dishes and all cleaning—a little gives such rich suds."

MRS. W. P. McEACHEN,
16 Rockwood Terrace, Medford, Mass.

You can soak your clothes in Rinso suds for a few minutes, an hour, overnight—or as long as you find convenient. Yet no matter how long you soak your clothes you can be sure that everything will be absolutely safe.

Love Denied

Sharlene Advised

CHAPTER 45

"SHARLENE!" He could not believe it. She spoke so quietly, almost dully. But it must be killing her. Stuart knew that she loved Kent Damerell more than any man deserved to be loved.

He knew, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that this love for Kent was woven into the very fabric of her heart. It was indestructible, as long as she lived.

"But," he expostulated after a moment. "Julie could never come between you and—Not Julie! Why, it's preposterous!"

"I don't know. He must have got unutterably sick of my making a life-work out of loving him! Do you remember, Stuart, that about 'A full soul loathes an honeycomb?'" Stuart glanced quickly at her, but she was going on meditatively: "And how a full soul must loathe some more honey!" She paused for a moment, then jumped abruptly to her feet. "But, gracious! I did not come here to wail!"

"Learned Better"

"Too bad I've got these panels to do for the library, so I can't take you to the Orient this time—"

They both laughed. "Yes, it's too bad! But seriously, Stuart, I've found out there's no use running away from trouble. It just runs right along with you! And I've learned better than to disrupt another person's life—to please myself. Yes, I've learned—but what a shocking lot of Good Fridays it's taken to hammer it in!" She shook her head with a rueful grin.

"What are you going to do, Sharlene?"

"I haven't an idea. The Beverly Hills place is being sold to settle the estate. I'll just drift awhile—I'll find a niche—"

A rap at the door and Morton presented his smiling face. He handed Stuart his car keys and told him: "The clutch just needed a little adjustment, Mr. Pennington. I fixed it all up for you."

"Why, thanks, Morton. That's mighty good of you!"

"Not at all, sir. It's a dandy little car and I liked doing it for you, sir."

"There, that's about it," she said. As they started to unclimb from their places, she turned to look at the carved doors in the west wall.

"These are fascinating, Stuart," she said, fingering them. "East Indian?"

He glanced apprehensively over his shoulder. "Yes, a Hindu woodcarver made them for me. He and I have become great friends. Here, you take the hammer, Morton."

Sharlene was about to open the carved doors, her fingers on the knobs. "May I?"

"Don't!" Stuart spoke sharply as he jumped down to the floor.

She turned in astonishment. "Oh, I beg your pardon—"

"Pardon me—I didn't mean to be so abrupt. But the—the spring lock has caught. I'll have to have it fixed."

"Oh!" she smiled in relief. "I was afraid I'd blundered into something secret. What is it—a shrine?"

Happy on Job

Later as they walked down the hill together, Morton having gone ahead to the car, Stuart said to her: "Don't worry, Sharlene. As soon as he comes back and you see him again—it will be all right with you."

"Do you think I'd be fool enough to go back to him?" Her tone was uncertain rather than indignant.

"Of course you'll go back to him. You did after the Cora incident, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You said a while ago that loving him is your life-work—well, then you'll have to make your adjustment to him some way, Sharlene—forgive a lot, I reckon. But you'll never be happy—you'll never be all there—without him."

She halted and looked long and deeply into his friendly blue eyes. Then she sighed.

"You really believe that, Stuart?"

"I'm convinced you can only be happy doing your job—and he sems to be your job!"

One evening when it had set in to rain in earnest, Stuart dismissed the boy who had been modeling for him, and climbed down from the ladder on which he had stood for hours while he painted. The great panel on which he had been working glowed in the last rays of light of the closing day. It had so much of sunlight of its own that it warmed the grey room to life.

He shudd-red, and then hearing a rap at the front door, went to answer it. Sharlene stood there under a dripping umbrella.

"Sharlene!" he exclaimed, pulling her in quickly out of the downpour. "What on earth brings you here? Is anything wrong?"

Slim and Jaunty

By Annice Brink

THIS JAUNTY little two-piece Spring suit has an air of "Tallyho! And away we go!" perhaps because of little details that suggest the postillion idea—the roll of the hat brim, the wide flat revers tapering into a slim, belted waistline, and the patch pockets. At any rate, it is a fashion find (around fourteen dollars) to be had in a light, all-wool diagonal suede tweed, and a range of attractive colors—a vivid light green like young birch trees budding, a cocoa-brown, navy and grey. The top coat is long enough to wear over smart little shirtwaist frocks—and there your practical spring wardrobe plans are solved! The off-the-face straw hat is trimmed with chamois bow and band. Both suit and hat are from a Boston shop; for details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bread DESSERTS You Will LIKE

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

DO YOU realize how much use of bread we make in the daily meals? This is probably brought to our attention much more forcefully at a time when we are deprived of it, as during the last war.

There is nothing quite as satisfying as white bread. It appeases hunger. We can serve it in so many ways.

Golden brown toast for breakfast; vary it to serve for tea by sprinkling with cinnamon sugar or grated orange rind and orange sugar; and bread that is bathed in milk and egg and fried to a golden brown, French toast is a high favorite. This can be used to serve as a breakfast dish, or as the basis for cream dishes. Also it can be served with fruit and whipped cream for a dessert.

Left-over bread can be used in cooking, in puddings and casserole., or it can be dried and used for bread crumbs. In using left-over bread the recipe should state whether it is soft or dried crumbs which should be used. Neither can be substituted successfully for the other.

Soft bread crumbs are prepared by crumbling the center of a slice of bread. Dry bread crumbs are prepared from bread which has been dried in a very slow oven until crisp but not brown. These later are used in puddings and scalloped dishes. To make buttered bread crumbs, allow one tablespoon butter to ½ cup of crumbs, and toss together with a fork. These dry crumbs may be kept on hand, but do not keep in a jar that is too air-tight or they will be moldy.

FRENCH TOAST WITH FRUIT COVER

Beat two egg yolks slightly and add few grains salt and one-half cup milk. Dip four large, thick slices bread in this mixture, coating thoroughly. Saute in butter until a nice brown on both sides. Split each of four slices canned pineapple into two thin rings and saute these in a little butter until a golden brown on each side. Lay a slice of toast on each breakfast plate, cover with two thin rings of pineapple and top with cold juicy rhubarb sauce. Serve at once. Serves four.

AVIS EXPLAINS BALCONY INCIDENT

CHAPTER 285

I DO NOT know what expression my own face mirrored, as we waited for Avis Arlen to answer my query as to what had frightened her upon the balcony outside the nursery.

If it reflected those upon the faces of Hugh and Lillian, it held widely diverging elements.

Eager interest, doubt, reluctant belief—all these were evident as Avis, with characteristic theatricalism, began her story.

"I could not sleep," she began, her voice almost a whisper, her eyes raised to Hugh's with the implication that thoughts of him had kept her awake. "That drive was so wonderful, I do not see how anybody could sleep, just remembering it. It seemed to me I should just die if I couldn't get a breath of fresh air.

"Of course, I had promised Mr. Spencer that I would go into my room, lock my door and not come out on the corridor again tonight. But when I opened my window and looked out on that lovely balcony, it just seemed to me as if I couldn't stand it in the room.

"I was sure Mr. Spencer couldn't mean the balcony, so I looked around to see what I could use to get down on it."

"Oh!" Avis looked at her, plainly startled. "Yes, I did. One had dropped out before mummy went to bed, and I put it out the window, braced it against a funny little coping or something that seemed just meant for me, and slid down it. But how did you know?"

DETERMINED TO SEE HUGH

"Mrs. Graham has sent the boys to bed for doing that trick, without permission and with no older person watching them," Lillian said. "But go on. When you reached the balcony, what happened?"

"Nothing," Avis said; and I experienced the flat, let-down feeling one has at being raised to a pitch of expectancy and then dropped incontinently. But she amended her denial a second later by saying, "Just then," and "I found myself in the state popularly and erroneously described as 'holding my breath.'"

"I stood by the balcony rail for a few minutes looking out on the lawn," Avis went on hesitatingly, and the eyes of Hugh and Lillian reflected my conviction that she had not confined her movements to standing by the rail, but had spent most of her time just outside the French doors trying to find out what we were doing and saying.

THE "BURGLAR"

Whether Hugh also saw through her maneuvers, I could not tell. His face gave no indication that he was doing anything but taking her story at its face value. He is not a vain man, and I was sure that, unless it were pointed out to him, he would not interpret the girl's presence upon the balcony as having any other purpose than curiosity.

"I don't know just how long I stood there," Avis went on slowly, still hesitating between her words and giving me, at least, the distinct impression that she was stretching the truth to her own convenience, "but just as I turned to get back into my window, I heard a noise, as if someone were climbing up the outside of the balcony."

I gave a distinct start. I had expected her to say that she had seen Samuel Brixton climbing down from his window to the balcony. Was it possible that we had misjudged him, and that he had not been guilty of the espionage of which we had accused him?

Mrs. Beeckman

Mourning Clothes Customs

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

There is a friend of ours who lost her parents. This friend is about 30 years of age. A. thinks she should wear her veil six months down over her face, and then wear it thrown back for six months. B. thinks three months is enough to wear a veil over the face.

READERS.

So thoroughly indefinite have become the customs of the wearing of mourning that nowadays each one is left to his or her own decision about what to wear and how long to wear it. All "regulations" for mourning have long since been abandoned, and instead of definite rules we have left only our personal choice in the matter.

About two years ago there seemed to be only one definite rule left. . . . that the closest relatives of the deceased wore veils to the funeral. Now even this suggestion has practically been given up. However, again this should be reasonably abided by, and if there is any comfort or convenience to us in wearing a veil, we should wear one.

The same fundamental common sense and reasonableness apply as the answers to all the questions concerning wearing mourning. One seldom sees now the heavy-hearted mourning veils, either plain or crepe-bordered, but there is no reason why we shouldn't wear one if we wish. And we should wear it or any other detail of mourning for as long or as short a time as it gives any comfort to our spirit. It is what is in our heart and what we feel in our spirits that counts. It is what we wish to do.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

"Our telephone is such a convenience!"

"Now, just to show you—

"Last Sunday was such a nice day that we drove up to Bill's home, but we telephoned first to make sure they were there. Then, on Monday I had an awfully pleasant visit by telephone with Mrs. Thompson whom I haven't seen in ages. I called Annie, too, to be sure she was coming to help with the housecleaning. Tuesday was that terribly rainy day, and I did all my marketing by telephone.

"On Wednesday, George called when I was ready to start dinner, and said he'd be late, so I didn't have a spoiled meal on my hands. Thursday, Mary talked for hours, I think, with that Wilson boy, and then I planned for the church benefit with all the club members. Yesterday, George was home from the office with a cold, and he and his boss talked back and forth a lot, and today I've just called my brother to tell him not to bring the children up to dinner tonight on account of George's cold.

'Now, don't you believe that my telephone has been a help to me this week? And it costs so little when you consider all the things it can do for you."

Get in touch with your local telephone business office and find out how little it will cost you to have a telephone.

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

The rules allowing commanders, captains and Eagles to be guests of Manager Philip DePetro of the Modern Theater when "Devil Dogs of the Air" is shown during the week of March 9 to 15 inclusive, are very specific.

Members are asked to keep them in mind. Here they are:

To obtain a guest ticket you must wear a bar attached to your wings. To get a bar you must form your own squadron and be a commander or captain, or you must pass with a grade of 70 or more the written Eagle examination.

No member can take the Eagle examination unless he or she has worn Junior Birdmen wings for three months. New members, however, can form a squadron and thus obtain bars to their wings.

All members who are eligible to obtain tickets will find "Devil Dogs of the Air" one of the best pictures they have seen. James Cagney and Pat O'Brien are co-starred in this thrilling story of pilots of the U. S. Marine Corps.

1,000,000 LBS. Here as Lent Begins

Ash Wednesday today found the fish pier, South Boston, well prepared to meet the increased Lenten demand for sea food.

Twenty vessels brought in upwards of 1,000,000 pounds of fish today, with at least one more cargo expected during the day. Receipts for the week were almost 5,000,000 pounds.

Wholesale prices were uneven, ccd being up half a cent the pound, while haddock sold off a cent. Little change in retail prices is anticipated.

FIREBUG HUNT In Two Blazes

Convinced that firebugs are at work in Roxbury and Charlestown, members of the police arson squad today investigated the two latest attempts to burn dwellings.

Death or serious injury from incendiary flames were averted early today when Mrs. Gertrude McGennan of Dudley street, Roxbury, saw a man crawl through a basement window across the street where 12 persons were sleeping. She spread an alarm when fire broke out.

The other suspicious fire was in Tremont street, Charlestown.

Jimmy Faces Bankruptcy

Proceedings Start on $13,000 New Claim

By International News Service

London, March 6—Claims against James J. "Jimmy" Walker in British courts totaled more than $20,000 today as a result of preliminary proceedings brought at Croydon court to force the formerly affluent Mayor of New York into bankruptcy.

A new claim, which is the basis of the bankruptcy suit, amounts to approximately $13,000. It is the amount of a default judgment obtained in New York by Hattie Carnegie, Inc., gown shop, according to Walker.

"Some of the items sound like telephone numbers," Walker commented, adding that the bill represented expensive purchases made by his former wife.

The Carnegie shop judgment was not mentioned in the hearing in Chancery court in London on February 20, when Walker, confronted by two other New York bills, testified that he was "broke."

Told bankruptcy proceedings are to begin in a week, the former mayor said:

OFFER TO EASE Holding Co. Bill

Washington, March 6 (INS)—Meeting widespread opposition to drastic provisions of the Rayburn-Wheeler bill abolishing holding companies by 1940, Robert Healy, SEC member, today offered liberalizing amendments before the House Interstate Commerce committee.

He proposed that the SEC be empowered to delay dissolution of public utilities holding companies for an indefinite period whenever it felt such dissolution would result in losses to investors.

'STRAW' Loans Charged IN BANK CASE

"Straw men" borrowed $210,000 from the Brockton Trust Company, according to Attorney Neil Leonard, counsel for the bank commissioner of Massachusetts, at the hearing of the $3,200,000 suit of affiliated banks against the Federal National Bank today.

"We intend to show that the $210,000 was made up of five notes," said Leonard. "We will show that four of the notes were for $50,000 each and one for $10,000. We will show that the 'straws' were officials of the Federal National Bank."

SEASON ON FOR 'Pilate's Daughter'

The first evening performance of "Pilate's Daughter," famous passion play of the Lenten season, will be given at 8:15 tonight, under auspices of the Mission Church, in St. Alphonsus Hall, Smith street, Roxbury.

There will be performances during Lent every Sunday afternoon and every Wednesday and Thursday evening. Special matinees for children will be given on March 30 and April 13.

MELLON Inquiry Adjourned

Pittsburgh, March 6 (INS)—Out of respect to Oliver Wendell Holmes, retired associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, who died this morning, the three-million dollar tax battle between Andrew W. Mellon and the federal government was adjourned here today.

Intelligent Penitence During Lent Urged

Intelligent penitence during the Lenten season was urged today by the Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, rector of Trinity Church, in an Ash Wednesday sermon.

The sermon included in part:

"Lent is apt to have overtaken us with our minds yet undecided as to just what specific disciplines we shall set ourselves for the keeping of it.

"If our Christian training was entirely recent, the temper of the times has perhaps unsettled our convictions about the value of giving up candy, desserts, theaters, dances, smoking, alcoholics or the like as a penance.

"With some reason we call these things in question. Unusually when a religion has grown dull, uninspired and lost its keen edge of enthusiasm, these secondary considerations assume undue prominence, and are out of focus to the weightier matters of the law—not that they are not entirely wholesome in themselves.

"It is sound spiritual psychology to center on some non-essential indulgence that we enjoy and to deny that as a discipline of the will, and for the ascetic benefit of proving to ourselves and to God that we are willing to deny ourselves for His sake.

"But there is this danger in it —it is apt to let us off too easy, increase complacency and self-satisfaction, instead of accomplishing the wholesome office of religion of thoroughly humbling us and making our lives more Godlike.

"Thus the critics of religion have noted that Christians are meticulous in their petty fastings, while they overlook vast complicity in social guilt that still makes havoc of human happiness in our world, that they make fetishes of small virtues and condone hard insensibilities to human hopes and happiness, and cruel complicities in social wrongs.

"Toward the keeping of Lent, one thing is clear. We must so arrange our calendars as to make time to be free to give ourselves absorbingly to this vigil with Christ, remembering his words, 'Could ye not watch with me one hour?'

"The old provisions to cancel our social schedule, to interrupt the too engrossing round of society, undoubtedly must still prevail. And it is at least our part to do what we can to mark off the season by giving religious engagements priority and right of way over worldly ages.

"This is too great an enterprise to be accomplished in the interstices and fragments of our time. Religious growth and awareness, thoroughly accomplished, take time and undivided attention."

WILLIAMS Quits in NRA SHAKEUP

Washington, March 6—The second big shakeup in NRA occurred when President Roosevelt accepted the resignation of S. Clay Williams, tobacco magnate, as chairman of the five-man NRA board.

Williams, who was subjected to almost as much attack as the original NRA boss, General Hugh S. Johnson, will stay on another two weeks at the President's request.

The resignation, while not unexpected, came as leaders in Congress prepared to eliminate many of the drastic provisions of the NRA act, now up for extension.

In an exchange of letters, made public at the White House, it was announced Williams was retiring because his return to private business is imperative.

MAN In Steel Vest QUESTIONED

Object of a city-wide police search after he had walked into a welding shop in Charlestown yesterday to have a steel, bullet-proof vest made, Francisco Santorili, 28, of Dover street, in the South End, was questioned at headquarters today.

He told Deputy Superintendent James R. Claflin that he was wearing the vest because he had been threatened by North and South End gangsters.

Lieutenant Francis Tiernan, in the Bureau of Records, later found that the man was carrying a .32 caliber revolver. He had no permit for it, police said.

Although his enemies remained nebulous to the police, they were real enough for him. He explained that he had slept in his uncomfortable vest all night. Experts doubted that it would stop a bullet.

GROVE 'RIGHT', SAYS SCHACHT

Lefty Groves Finds Old Speed in Whip

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1935 11

CONFIDENT

PUTS LIFE IN CAMP

By Austen Lake

Sarasota, Fla., March 6—No less a cagy strategist than Al Schacht, former Washington coach, who came to Boston along with Joe Cronin as the New Fenway boss' right eye, is authority for the statement that Lefty Grove is "right."

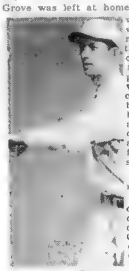
Grove's much discussed salary wing, which collapsed in training camp last season following his purchase from Philadelphia for $150,000, today passed its first test under Schacht's careful scrutiny.

As in the case of his former managers, Connie Mack and Bucky Harris, Grove has been allowed to conduct his own training, which consists mostly of conditioning exercises, running short dashes, chasing fungoes and fielding bunts.

But this morning Robert Moses picked out a catcher for himself and in the course of his warmup showed more speed than at any time during the 1934 season, when he was winning eight games in the closing weeks of the campaign.

"That proves it," said Schacht. "His arm must be right. If it wasn't, a pitch like that would have torn it off."

And so it would seem. For during the Sox western trips, when Grove was left at home alone to work out with Tommy Daley, the battery coach, the slightest pressure would cause him to throw his glove aside in disgust and head for the showers.



Lefty Grove

In keeping with Schacht's expression of confidence in Grove's complete cure, is Lefty's own mental and social attitude. He believes he is "right," and that belief is evident in his every action.

Although not due for another day, some of the regulars are already beginning to drift into camp. Don Kellett, the ex-Penn captain, arrived late yesterday afternoon and Manager Joe Cronin reports that Dahlgren, the rookie first baseman, is already on his way from the Coast.

LUCAS ON MAT

Meets Germaine

It will be a best two out of three falls affair.

BOSS BILL GREETS HIRED HAND AT CAMP

BILL McKECHNIE BABE RUTH

Friendly greetings are exchanged by Manager McKechnie of the Braves, and Ruth, latest addition to Bill's playing corps. Experts say this scene will be repeated soon, with Babe assuming the managerial reins and bidding Bill farewell as field boss. At any rate, all's well now, and harmony reigns as Babe toils to reach good playing condition.

McNamara Will Be Named B. C. Football Coach Tonight

FINAL Meeting at HEIGHTS

DOWNES WILL ASSIST

A successor to Joe McKenney as head football coach at Boston College will be definitely confirmed this evening when the advisory board on athletics meets at University Heights tonight at 8 p. m. and then submit their selection to President Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J.

Danny McNamara, who [illegible] as backfield coach during the McKenney regime at Holy Cross, was particularly favored of the job, according to all reports today, and he will sign a two-year contract at $5000 a year.

It has also been revealed that Harry Downes, present freshman coach at Boston College football and Bill Ormsby, end coach under McKenney, will be named to McNamara aides. Ormsby will retain his same job, while Downes will act as head freshman coach and also line coach of the varsity.

The appointment of McNamara will meet with popular approval in as much as he has been favored for the post ever since McKenney resigned to take over a new job. Adam Walsh's name was also prominently mentioned in connection with [illegible] but [illegible] Notre Dame captain has already signed to coach at Bowdoin.

Flynn vs. Curry On Revere Mat

17,000 See Bruins COP, 3-1

By Walter Kiley

A burning, raging hockey fever, spreading even more rapidly than in those mad lust days of 1929-1930, has struck in Boston's hockey midst.

Seventeen thousand husky-throated fans jammed Boston Garden, 5000 [illegible] were turned away [illegible] as the Bruins [illegible] initial certainties [illegible] Stanley Cup playoff [illegible] and outsmarted [illegible] Rangers 3 to 1.

There was little doubt of the Bruins' superiority over the Rangers. This despite the usual high grade work of the Rangers' speedy and powerful first line of Bill and Bun Cook and Frank Boucher.

In fact all the honors went to Boston's first line of Marty Barry, Max Kaminsky and Dit Clapper, who turned in one of the most unusual and rare performances in hockey history.

TO BE PLAYED TOMORROW

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6—Now that Babe Ruth and Rabbit Maranville, our turnstile twins, have fallen into the routine of daily practice, life has returned to some degree of normalcy in St. Pete.

And Manager Bill McKechnie is seizing the opportunity to bear down on the rest of his tribe, which must start playing exhibition games Saturday, regardless of whether the Babe and the Rabbit are ready for competition by that time.

Pete Pitt has ordered the first scrub game of the season tomorrow. This assuming [illegible] will [illegible] him a line on how much he can count on each of his charges in the week-end contests against the Cincinnati Reds in Tampa.

According to present indications Team A. on the morrow will have Ruth at first, Mellon at second, Urbanski at short and Whitney at third with Berger, Moore and Thompson in the outfield.

Fletcher at first, Mowry at second, Sullivan at short and Cosgarart at third will make up the Team B. infield. Johnny Tyler will be flanked by two kid pitchers in the garden.

HALF A GAME

At any rate nobody will be permitted to play more than half of either contest against the Reds. Rookie batterymen will become fielders if necessary.

And Fred Frankhouse, Bob Smith and Flint Rhem will be the only regular flingers called into service.

If the crowd which sat in at Babe Ruth's debut as a Brave can be used as a yard stick, some-

New Bats

Bam Orders Six More

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6—A half dozen new bats were on their way to Babe Ruth today, following his first workout with the Braves here.

AUSTEN LAKE on Elegy In A Realtors Grave Yard

SARASOTA, FLA., MARCH 6—A little distance from Sarasota, through the weedy tangle of scrub palm, pine and marsh-grass, lies the limbo of the late John McGraw's lost dream.

Where crumbling portals, reeling files of ornamental street lights and miles of colored paving have gone back to the primitive jungles, John McGraw had planned an earthly paradise to be peopled by angels.

Austen Lake

It is scarce six years since the tourist parade was on the hoof in Florida, folk who came with their life savings pinned to their underwear and rushed greedily into Sarasota real estate parlors to buy little postage stamp squares from the realtor's maps, which glib salesmen said were barefaced steals at $50,000, because, confidentially, the lucky purchaser would be kittycornered from the new million dollar high school.

* * *

Drawing Board Heaven

WITH INTENT TO benefit his fellow man and wring out some lovely profits for himself, McGraw took option on a section of deep-tangled wildwood and set Negroes with machetes and bush-hooks to clearing the land.

Architects came with their fine flights of fancy and made drawings of fairy-tale homes, where little watercolor children played and shouted on lush, hand-painted lawns.

They drew luxurious country clubs with flouncy ladies and fashion-plate dudes supping from frosted glasses, and lovely lagoons on which imported gondoliers paddled lovers under strings of paper lanterns.

And McGraw set up such tinsel teasers as the street lights, gingerbread archways, gaudy pavings, and corner posts to say that this was Ty Cobb causeway, and this Christy Mathewson turnpike, and that Hans Wagner boulevard.

* * *

McGraw's Own Bug Bites Giants

McGRAW DID NOT FORESEE that his own Giant players, training then at Sarasota, would be stung by the same suckerism as the simple tourists.

So that, instead of chasing fungo hits and steaming off their winter's fat, the boys would huddle in little clusters around the ball yard and mumble excitedly over sub division blue prints.

And when Dave Bancroft, as McGraw's right hand man, pleaded, would they please, for sweet mercy's sake, hold a little infield practice, Freddy Lindstrom replied, no, he had to dress and hurry to close an option on a corner lot, lest he lost $100,000 by somebody else grabbing it off.

Freddy added that, anyhow he was sick of the ball grind and might retire to give full time to his land holdings, which at current market value were worth a million.

Where Now the Wild Pig Grunts

THAT WAS SCARCELY SIX years ago. And now the wild honeysuckle twines from the shattered bases of McGraw's street lamps. A clutter of tropic rubbish, moss, lichen, palmetto and rank saw-grass, hides the gullied pavings.

Yankee's Mirage

BUT EVEN A MORE fantastic baseball fantasy is the Ringling Island, just off the Sarasota coast, where the unfinished hulk of the Ritz Hotel lies with steel girders sticking, like dry bones, against the skyline.

I hear that Colonel Ruppert is still interested in the venture and that, only lately, he was in Washington to ask a government subsidy for carrying the project through.

Meanwhile the half-finished hotel lies like some medieval ruin, its corridors buried with tumbledown materials and the sea-gulls nesting in de luxe suites that might have rented for $200 a day.

The dining hall in which 1000 of our dollar nobility were to have feasted under crystal and gilt, shelters a few rheumy-eyed pelicans and furtive, furred creatures which scuttle into the walls.

Spanish moss grows from the lobby ceilings under which gents in golf bloomers and painted, seductive ladies should be busy having a year's fun in a week's time.

Outside, where the jungle has crept up to the butlery windows, a mocking bird is singing from a wild magnolia tree, piping a melancholy, liquid lament for the might-have-been dreams of men.

"He was just too long in one spot and, I don't care how enthusiastic you are, when that happens you lose some of your zip. Mark my words, the change to his old town of Boston and to a new league will give Ruth more life than he's had in several years."

"The only mistake you can make about that guy is to predict when he'll be through. Watch him react to that reception he's going to get when he returns to Boston on opening day. Ruth always goes big when the stakes are high and people play up to him. Why, he's liable to belt a couple the first day and then for get to stop.

"Of course, he'll see a lot of good pitching from the Deans, Hubbell, Munce, Warneke and that crowd. But I didn't notice that National League pitching upset him much in the 1928 and 1932 World Series.

LITTMAN CAN HIT

Mr. Boston Greb No. 1 Middle

By Jack Conway

THERE HAS been considerable discussion as to the merits of various middleweights since Tait Littman of Milwaukee, conqueror of Lou Brouillard, was signed to meet Al McCoy of Dorchester at a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden, Friday.

I rate Harry Greb as the best middleweight I have ever seen in action. He was a human windmill, and tossed punches from every angle.

Mr Boston

Greb won the middleweight title from Johnny Wilson at the Polo Grounds. Wilson made a furious finish, and could have been given a draw. In a return bout, Greb won by a wide margin.

WILSON'S RATING

WILSON was a rugged determined fighter with a punch and was generally underrated. He won the championship from Mike O'Dowd at Madison Square Garden and later successfully defended it against the St. Paul warrior in a St. Patrick's Night show in the old New York Garden.

Wilson was Marty Killilea's first manager, received $18,000 for his title defense match with O'Dowd. They don't pay that kind of money to middleweights today. Lou Brouillard got less than $5000 when he lost his middleweight crown to Vince Dundee at the Garden.

I place Wilson next to Greb with Marcel Thil, Ceferino Garcia, Lou Brouillard, Young Jack Thompson, Vince Dundee and Teddy Yarosz in that order.

Others I like are Stanley Ketchel could have beaten Greb, but I am not prepared to accept Ketchel's championship, primarily a puncher, and would have had his difficulties hitting the fast moving Greb.

I saw Billy Papke box Bob Moha at the Armory Club's quarters on Tremont street long after Billy was past his prime. He wouldn't have had a picnic with Greb.

MALONE'S CASE

Tommy Walsh, Malone's manager, told me he didn't want to match Jock with Greb as he felt the latter could win.

"We can make more money challenging Greb than fighting him," said the shrewd Walsh. "Once Greb beat Malone we wouldn't have anything to talk about."

The high spot in Malone's Boston career was the night he knocked out Georges Ward of Elizabeth, N. J. He literally hung Ward on the ropes after he scored with a barrage of right hand punches to the jaw.

An effort was then made to match Malone with Eddie Shevlin of Roxbury a great welterweight. Shevlin wisely refused to spot weight to Malone, and the match was never made.

Malone then fought Wilson at Braves Field, and was knocked out.

Jock got the jitters before the bout. I had picked Wilson to win, and Malone sent word to me before he entered the ring that he was in [illegible] He knew the odds were against him.

McCOY PUNCHER

The Littman bout will test McCoy. Tait has beaten Lou Brouillard and other first flight boxers. He is only 20 years of age, and has an idea he is going places in the ring.

A Farm Boy Almost Goes Down to the Most Terrible Death of All

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You've heard about people who were scared out of a year's growth? Well, here is a bird who was scared into a year's—or maybe six or seven years—growth. Lester O. Reppert of 321 East 20th street, New York city, sends me the story of a fright that would have whittled Primo Carnera right down to a midget. For a few minutes it was a toss-up whether Les was going to be man or mincemeat, but scares seem to work just the opposite with him.

He says that he was small for his age when the doggone thing happened, but soon afterward he began to shoot up. Now he is six feet three and a half, weighs 210 and swears it was the fright that did it.

It was December, 1920, and Les Reppert was living with his uncle on a farm near Pennington, Pa. He and his cousin, a lad about his own age, were out on the barn floor feeding fodder, or, in other words, busting up cornstalks into pieces small enough for a cow to get her mouth around.

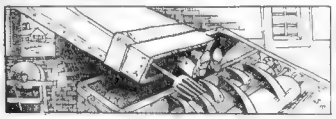
Les's uncle didn't have a regular corn shredder. He had improvised one by hooking an old threshing machine up to the motor of a tractor, and using the cylinder part of the thresher—a whirling thing covered with scary, wicked-looking teeth—to grind up the cornstalks as they were fed into the machine.

The machinery was down on the floor of the barn. Les and his cousin were up in the loft, forking the cornstalks into the hopper of the thresher by a long, absurd vertical chute. They had been working for about an hour when Les's uncle came in and called his cousin to go with him to another part of the barn and left Les to feed the shredder alone.

Left alone, Les worked twice as hard trying to make up for his cousin's absence, and it was the old story of too much haste causing trouble. In shoveling those big forkfuls of fodder down the chute he didn't take the care he would have if he had been working more slowly. Some of those forkfuls he threw in were just too doggone big. They jammed in the chute and clogged it up.

Les took the pitchfork and shoved the fodder down as far as he could reach, but that wasn't far enough to clear the chute. Then he had one of those ideas you get when you're in a hurry—did something he wouldn't have done if he'd taken time to give it a second thought. He let himself down over the side of that steeply inclined chute—hung with his left arm while, with his right, he pried the jammed fodder loose with the pitchfork.

The fodder dropped clear of the chute and fell into the shredder. The chute was clean now, and Les could look down and see the cylinder of the thresher as it chewed up those last few forkfuls of cornstalks. That whirling cylinder didn't look so good to Les. It could chop him up into hamburger as easily as it could those cornstalks. All of a sudden he got a notion that he wanted to get out of that chute as fast as he could, and then, for the first time, he realized that he couldn't.



With his left hand alone Les couldn't pull himself back out of the chute. He knew that before he even tried. His other hand held the pitchfork, and that made it practically useless, because if he dropped the fork it would fall into the shredder, and while Les wasn't above wrecking that shredder to save his life, he didn't quite relish the idea of having shredder teeth flying off in all directions.

Just one of those broken teeth, flying upward with the speed of a bullet, could do plenty of damage to a lad hanging not three feet from the cylinder. And suppose one of them hit him in the head—knocking him senseless? Then he would lose his hold and drop down into that mangling mess of broken machinery.

There was nothing to do but hang on. And even that he couldn't do very long. Already his left arm was beginning to ache from the strain of supporting his entire body. Les braced his body against the sides of the chute with his knees to take as much weight as possible off the aching arm, and cursed himself silently for not having sense enough to shut the motor off before going down into the mouth of that grim, champing mechanism.

Les yelled for help, but his voice couldn't be heard over the clatter of machinery. He prayed—cursed—yelled some more. But no one heard him, and his prayers and curses had no power to stop the terrible grinding whirl of the cylinder below.

Five minutes more—five minutes of nerve-wracking suspense—five minutes of terrible pain. Les's arm felt as if it were ready to pull out of its socket when suddenly he heard a cry overhead. It was his cousin's voice. His cousin, who had come looking for him, stood, puzzled, at the top of the chute wondering what had become of Les. Les let out a scream—not much of a scream, for Les was too weak now even to yell very loud—but his cousin heard it. He rushed to the chute, grabbed Les's arm, Les struggled over the side—and fainted.

At that the joke was on Les. When he came to again he saw that he still had the pitchfork in his hand. His cousin was white as a sheet, and Les says he didn't look like any black-face comedian himself. They began talking at the same time, and Les explained how the pitchfork had kept him from using both hands and climbing out. His cousin looked at him sort of funny when he said that. "Why the devil," he asked, "didn't you toss the fork up out of the chute?"

Well, you know, doggone it, Les never thought of that

U. S. TO EXPAND CURRENCY

By ROBERT HEMPHILL
Financial Authority

Mr. Donald Richberg, in his defense of the New Deal before the Old South Forum in Boston, says "There will be no inflation for six years."

In the improper sense in which I assume Mr. Richberg uses the term, inflation, this statement would mean that this depression would remain in its present static state for more years.

However, under our present system, in which the banks issue our principal money, both inflation and depression are under control of the banks and not the government. The government has little or nothing to do with it.

Inflation consists in issuing money, or some usable substitute, such as bank credit, in excess of the amount necessary to effect the exchange of our products and services and full production.

With our present population, with substantially full employment, we would require thirty-three to thirty-five billions of dollars in circulation as demand bank deposits to effect the exchange of our goods and services.

This would be an increase of 16 to 18 billions of dollars over the amount of demand bank deposits shown in the last statement of all banks as of June 30, 1934.

These deposits could be increased to the necessary amount (1) by the government calling and paying in cash for so much of its outstanding bonds, or (2) by the banks loaning book credit to industry and commerce.

Such an expansion of the currency or bank deposits would NOT BE INFLATION.

Further expansion of currency or bank deposits would create a demand for pay ords beyond our capacity to produce and this unsatisfied demand would raise prices of property, goods and services until it would require the excess money to exchange the same quantity of goods and services. This would be inflation.

If thereafter money was expanded just as our productive capacity and our population increased, we would continue on this new price level indefinitely.

In England and other advanced countries which have sound branch banking systems which normally carry cash reserves of 25 per cent to 40 per cent, not as a matter of law, but as a matter of common sense and sound judgment, the central banks invariably expand their loans immediately the government or the central bank increases their reserves by the issue of additional currency.

CZAR WANTED,

Wall Street To Seek Own Ruler

By International News Service

New York, March 6—Wanted: Man to head old concern. Salary $100,000 a year. Must have implicit confidence of American people. Apply New York Stock Exchange, 11 Wall street.

The above want ad has not yet appeared in the classified columns of New York newspapers. But hints of the situation have appeared in the news columns and the job is already seeking the man.

The Stock Exchange is considering the example of organized baseball, which elevated Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis to czar of its domain after the "sell-out" of the White Sox was exposed and of the movies which, when scandal endangered Hollywood, chose its czar from the President's cabinet in the person of Will H. Hays.

The demand for a czar was something of a surprise to the governors of the exchange who were asking Richard Whitney to put aside personal interest and stand for re-election May 13, when they called a meeting behind closed doors to test the sentiment of the members.

They were not long in getting it. E. A. Pierce, head of the largest wire house on the exchange, with branch offices from coast to coast, immediately suggested that the presidency of the exchange be made a salaried position for the first time in history and filled with a man "like Coolidge."

He said that he could only think of three men who could fill the requirement, but he did not name them.

The suggestion has grown in favor since. The reason is quite evident. The stock exchange is not sharing in any recovery and many members feel that the management has not done all it could to regain public confidence.

Only 279,000 shares were traded in the short session Saturday. These half days used to be good for two million.

Trading since the first of the year has totaled less than half in the same period last year and is less than the doldrum days at the end of the Hoover administration.

The government gave the stock exchange and all other exchanges a czar in the person of Joseph Kennedy, head of the SEC, while members feared the restrictions of government regulation they saw beneficial to some restoration of public confidence would follow.

It has not, however, so as a result, a $100,000 a year job is open if the right man can only be found.

STEEL SCRAP Holds Steady

New York, March 6—While steel scrap prices are steadier generally a drop of 50 cents a ton at Philadelphia lowered the Iron Age index for heavy melting material to $11.50 a gross ton from $11.67 in the previous week.

The composites for pig iron and finished steel are unchanged at $17.00 a ton and 2.124 cents a pound respectively.

FORBES AGREES WITH JOHNSON

NEW DEAL IS FALTERING

By B. C. FORBES

General Johnson voices the conclusion of most business men when he declares emphatically, in reference to the New Deal, that "the push is gone. The drive is stopped. The plan seems to be in the gravest danger of frustration."

B. C. Forbes

They have become skeptical of President Roosevelt's promises made last fall, that he was determined to co-operate wholeheartedly with business and industry to restore confidence and activity: they have become alarmed over the magnitude of public expenditures and over threatened taxation burdens; they dislike and distrust the attitude of organized labor; they fear that Washington's eagerness to break up large utility enterprises may be followed by similar action against other lines of industry: finally, they are apprehensive over the possibility of currency inflation through force of the unsatisfactory circumstances now being brought about.

Usually Wall Street is the most jittery spot in America. I've been away from Wall Street for a fortnight, mingling with all kinds of business men from different states, and I've seldom encountered little but pessimism.

The best that even inherent optimists have to say is "America will somehow pull through, just as we have always pulled through before, regardless of politics and politicians."

Listen to one American who started in the humblest circumstances, fought adversity, became a real leader in his community, piloted the principal bank which successfully all through the depression, and is recognized as possessing abundant horse sense, Edward C. Romth, president of the First National Bank of Miami:

"Washington, the country, is riding toward disaster, the government's squandering of money is suggestive of the Mississippi bubble. Such tactics are as old as history—and they have always culminated in an explosion. Al Capone isn't Public Enemy No. 1; Washington is.

"Unless we can get rid of bureaucracy and re-establish democracy, conditions are going to be a lot worse, the greatest problem today is the high cost of government. Taxes may destroy the capitalistic system."

"I would like to invest half-a-million in new buildings right now, giving employment to quite a lot of men and distributing a tidy sum in wages. But I'm scared of Washington and of what it may do in queer things; and I'm scared of the labor unions—there's no telling what trouble might arise between different building crafts, delaying operations and adding cruelly to the building cost. So I'm just hugging the shore."

A Chicagoan who has developed various big enterprises:

"I'm cured of the spirit of enterprise—at least for the present. If I make anything, taxes take two-thirds of it. If I lose, well, I'm just that much poorer."

Despite everything said and done —and not done—I have faith that America will rise superior to her present troubles sooner or later and enjoy more widespread prosperity than ever before.

Copper Buying Abroad

Fair Volume With Varying Prices

Copper buying abroad was in moderate volume with the prices obtained varying appreciably due to exchange variations that characterize the various currencies.

In the domestic market the rate for buying continues good considering the general situation. Sales Monday of Blue Eagle copper for domestic shipment came to somewhat over 4,000,000 pounds, making total sales for the first three business days of March just under 9,000,000 pounds.

European destinations were at levels corresponding with 6.70 to 6.825 cents, c. i. f., Hamburg, Havre and London, with probably 6.725 to 6.75 cents typical.

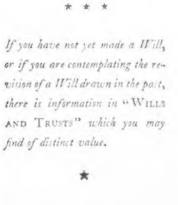
Every One Should Make a Will



THERE is danger in leaving no Will . . . But a Will already drawn should not be looked upon as a final, irrevocable step. Wills may be redrawn as often as changing conditions affect the disposition of property.

If you have made your Will without the advice of an attorney you cannot be sure that it is drawn according to law. A Will is a technical document, the drawing of which demands the legal skill and practical experience which your attorney possesses. He will be glad to discuss with you the appointment of this Company as your Executor and Trustee.

To gain the full benefit of Old Colony Trust Company's fiduciary service your Will should name this Company Executor and Trustee.

Celebrate Anniversary

During the life of the basement store since its opening 25 years ago, 112,000,000 sales have been made amounting to about a quarter of the total store business, according to Cameron Thompson, merchandise manager.

Eccles Wants

POWERS FOR Banks

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Inflation, as Donald Richberg sees it, may be a dead issue, but Marriner S. Eccles continues his fight for more liberal Federal Reserve requirements.

The new head of the reserve board is going to make it possible for banks to extend long term credits. He would do this by making the promissory notes of banks, secured by sound assets, acceptable by the Federal Reserve Bank for advances. Inflation when it comes will sure-ly be passed by a vast credit expansion. And it is in legislative desires of Mr. Eccles clearly in that direction.

M. S. Eccles

The pound sterling circumstances its dizzy slide with no serious interruptions. Gold goes to fresh highs in affected markets. And the pressure on France become greater and greater. Especially since the Italian fire indicates that it has no intention of being outdone by sterling. It is an acute world situation that will precipitate a crash somewhere. Brokers are after a reason for unexpected weakness in domestic markets hardly need look elsewhere. Stability in the midst of such mingled monetary affairs is hardly given to any one country.

Notebook: Last stand of the bulls is 89 on the industrial average . . . It is rather too bad that sterling had to become flighty and upset their hopes and plans . . . Since they had done a rather decent job of caring for the liquidation of stale accounts . . . If the 90 price on the hourly releases is avoided, however, the interruption may prove only to have been temporary and irritable-some . . . Best news we can imagine would be selling of gold by India . . . That would indicate those shrewd traders thought the yellow metal high enough.

In the midst of the selling, traders were inclined to overlook one cheering note. That is the sudden shifts in the various groups from disconnected to uniform movement. True, it came on the downside, but if danger levels are not broken, it will promise good action in the other direction, when the time comes. It is a market action to be kept under close watch.

Briefs—While Air Reduction has been giving a wishy-washy tape performance it still holds above danger levels . . . That increase in the number of telephones in use in February is cheering . . . 37,000 gain this year against 35,000 gain last year . . . For the Bell system . . . American Telephone, however, insists on acting stockmarket-wise as though it would be available under 100 . . . One operating indicator is the one thing that worries us . . . It stubbornly refuses to indicate selling has dried up.

BOSTON

Stocks Are MIXED

Utilities were entirely neglected, the drift downward lower levels. Edison of Boston scored a minor gain of ½, to 107½; Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred equalled this to sell at 44. Torrington was off ¼ at 73¾, while Hygrade Sylvania preferred showed a gain of a point at 106½.

GRAINS

Soar, Later TUMBLE

Chicago, March 6 (AP)—Grains soared suddenly in price today, and then suffered a quick reaction much more than wiping out gains.

The rise of prices followed a rush to buy owings in great degree to erroneous reports from Washington that further devaluation of the dollar was probable.

An official statement later that devaluation inferences were without warrant led to the ensuing setback of grain prices.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Exposing a Forgery

False Propaganda for League

THE sacrosanct and infallible American political professor received a staggering blow between the eyes when Senator Borah exposed in the Senate the forgery of an alleged quotation from George Washington advocating entangling alliances with foreign powers.

This forgery illustrates the depths to which the advocate of "internationalism" will stoop to catapult this country into the cesspool of European intrigue.

The quotation, which appeared in the WASHINGTON POST in an editorial on January 12, 1934, is as follows:

"When, our institutions being firmly consolidated and working with complete success, we might safely and perhaps beneficially take part in the consultations held by foreign states for the advantage of the nations."

THE POST swallowed this hook, line and sinker in spite of the fact that any one acquainted with Washington's literary style would have said instantly he never wrote it.

Senator Borah began to dig.

The legislative reference service reported that it could find no such quotation in Washington's writings, but that the quotation was used in Professor George H. Blakeslee's "Recent Foreign Policy in the United States," published in 1925.

TRACKED to his lair, Professor Blakeslee came clean and confessed that the quotation "was not taken directly from Washington's works," but was from an article written by Professor Horace M. Kallen, of the New School of Social Research, on the League of Nations and American foreign policy in the JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.

Professor Kallen passed the buck to his secretary, who said that the secretary who assisted the Honorable Kallen in preparing the article was no longer in his employ and "THERE IS, OF COURSE, SOME POSSIBILITY THAT SHE QUOTED INCORRECTLY."

In denouncing the skulduggery of the professorial-internationalist ring Senator Borah's language is none too strong when he calls it a "criminal falsehood."

What will these professors and "internationalists" be up to next? Forging an indorsement of Communism by Calvin Coolidge?

Eating More Fish

Object of Campaign

TO INCREASE the eating of fish is the object of a campaign run by the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

And remember also that in these days Massachusetts oysters and clams are raised in seeded beds; in underwater "farms" where they're planted much like peas and potatoes.

The new idea is that fish ought to figure in our meals three or four times a week.

The current high prices of meats, the comparatively low cost of New England fish and the arrival of Lent make an ideal combination to support the movement.

Moon Erases Distance

News from Harvard

Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, Harvard professor, and Dr. A. L. Loomis of New York, announced recently they had discovered the moon affects the distance between the United States and Europe.

Their checkup showed that tides are not confined to the water, but include the earth we've always regarded as solid.

Certain phases of the moon reduce, by means of these "earth tides," by as much as sixty-three feet the distance between the United States and Europe.

It was long ago determined by sentimental song writers that the moon was able to reduce the distance between two lovers.

Chicken-Feed to Mike

That Half Million

The Bell Rings Clear!

By Nelson Harding

Let the schoolhouse bell speak clearly,
That none may mistake its message,
As its strong reverberations
Echo far across the nation.

As the bell calls all to classes,
As it summons students, teachers
To the work of education,

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Broken Heart or Itching Palm?

Should American courts be used as Clip Joints?

Should they empioy their prestige and power—and the taxpayers' money—to aid and abet Gyp Jobs?

We don't, of course, call them Gyp Jobs. To the contrary, we have impressive and legal terms for such actions.

Elsie Robinson

And is there any more dignity or decency to most of them than there is to a common dog fight?

WOMAN LEADING

Plenty of Americans believe that there isn't. And are all for remedying the situation.

In Indianapolis a woman is leading the way. Mrs. Robert West Nicholson, Indiana's only woman legislator, has no pretty illusions about the motive behind most alienation suits.

"Every attorney," says she, "knows that these suits which enable a woman to capitalize on her own indiscretions, or her husband to capitalize on his wife's indiscretions, for the most part are merely blackmail."

"NOT AN ACHING HEART BUT AN ITCHING PALM"—that's the urge behind the legal papers, says Legislator Nicholson. Accordingly she has drafted a measure that would bar ALL alienation, breach of promise and seduction suits, and even forbid the name of corespondents in divorce proceedings—and has succeeded in obtaining a vote of 87 to 7 in passing the measure through the House.

The New York Bar Association have even meaner terms for this practice. It's nothing more or less than the old, "so-called badger game," say they.

Remember how Dead-eye Dick and his lovely mate, Cyanide Sal, used to frame Charlie, the City Sucker, in the sixth act of that heart-rending melierdrammer, "SHE DONE ME DIRT" or "JUST A SOCK AT TWILIGHT"?

Well, that, according to the the brainy gentlemen of the New York Bar Association, is what's behind all these so-expensive tears.

And it's time we got through using our legal machinery for stick-up stuff like that.

Piffle! If women are so dumb they need such protection, they should revert to their original status of idiots and children—keep away from apartments and hotel rooms where wicked men can take advantage of them.

And if they aren't dumb—if they know what they are doing and are fit to enjoy equality with men—then they should be held responsible for their acts, and have no need of protective legislation or cash compensation.

As a matter of fact, no sensitive woman would ask for such compensation. No self-respecting woman would accept it. And such suits—instead of being a favor—are an insult to every intelligent female.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 6—Greenwich Village is having its Serious Moment again. For a time it threatened to go completely Coney Island with cock-eyed cafes and goofy floor shows. Dining around Washington Square became a sort of rubber chicken hoax with an exploding cigar climax.

Instead of such long ago characters as Tiny Tim, Sonia and Bobby Edwards, the visitor found thwarted crooners, touts for uptown clip joints and the variegated and sweatered pick-thanks of the carnival shows. But the mellow type of small and cosy restaurant are opening again.

O. O. McIntyre

In a Macdougall street cellar I noticed a two-tabled place, seating not more than 10, with open kitchen and sputtering candles. It bore the sun-bonnety name of Emma Lou's. Off the more traveled paths were several ashine with wall-hung pots and pans likes those on the Montmartre peak.

In each were studious folk. The lone figure huddled over a book. A pair of artists in deadly earnest palaver. There were no distracting orchestras about although in one a wandering accordionist pumped a muted aria without reward. The Village for the moment is engrossed in higher things.

A very serious friend, a few floors above, whose profession is vastly tedious, renews his supply of patience at intervals by slipping up to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. There in idle contemplation he stands before a Corot.

Rian James who deserted columning in Brooklyn for a Hollywood writing berth, has become one of the most prolific scribblers on the west coast. In the past two and a half years he has turned out a total of 29 books and screen plays.

One of his swiftest hits was a scenario started and completed in 18 days. Then he went to bed for 10.

Irvin Cobb also appears to have settled permanently on the Pacific Coast, and it is increasingly likely New York will see him only on occasional flying trips to visit his daughter Buff and grand-children.

He is reported disposing of both his Park Avenue apartment and country home in Lazy Lane, Easthampton.

He journeyed to Hollywood to remain three months and has been there nearly a year, having purchased in the meantime a villa at Santa Monica, across a canyon from Will Rogers. A decisive factor in the change was Mrs. Cobbs' delight in California, plus her better health there.

Baird Leonard, so far, has never bracketed in her Manhattan monotypes that distinct strand of perfect husbands so often annexed by rich women. They are dog Trays of faithfulness, impecunious but handsome men of the world, frequently of foreign birth.

They drink like gentlemen, know the correct flair of the white tie, dancing divinely, order a slick dinner and indulge small talk No amount of partying fatigues them. They are purely ornamental—human bric-a-brac that comes tremendously high.

Idwal Jones took a bunch of Hollywood friends to Baja California, Mexico, a recent week-end to see a silver mine. The lure was the idea of eating real tamales along the way. And they did, stuffing on them at every posada.

The magazines' youngest editor, Otis L. Wiese, has joined the pent-houses on what is perhaps the grandest scale of his craft. His duplex mosque in the East 80's includes 12 rooms, 5 baths and a variety of terraced gardens.

Mr. Wiese came out of Iowa and when he took his post several years ago had just turned 21.

Arnold Reuben, delicatessener and first nighter, has achieved his earliest ambition—a sandwich salon on Fifth avenue. He originated the conceit of naming sandwiches for celebrities, usually of stage and screen.

The first newspaperman to receive such gastronomic glorification was S. Jay Kaufman. When any of the sandwich cult displeases Reuben he has puckish method of retribution.

If the offender is an actor he not only marks down the price of the sandwich but makes the chief ingredient ham. We have a notion to yell a swell bologna candidate and make a running slide back into the igloo.

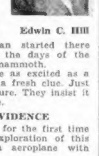
U. S. 'Garden of Eden'?

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Dr. Howard Barnum, of the American Museum of Natural History, is back from the Southwest with a new collection of dinosaur bones, which, when assembled, will make an impressive new representation in the life parade.



Edwin C. Hill

Just now scientists are working overtime on the fascinating possibility that our own western plains were in the Garden of Eden—that man started there away back in the days of the great shaggy mammoth.

And they are as excited as a detective with a fresh clue. Just a clue, to be sure. They insist it is nothing more.

FOUND HIS EVIDENCE

Dr. Barnum, for the first time in scientific exploration of this kind, used an aeroplane with great success.

From the air he and his associates could get the lay of the land, as it might have controlled pre-historic animal migrations, and gradually close in on likely locations of ancient boneyards.

Archaeologists were with him, and they found traces of little man, probably just getting on his hind legs in those days, but ready to take on the uncouth and scaly animal world for a long-term engagement.

All this is another chapter or perhaps a fragment of a chapter, in a story staked out by Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution at Washington; Sir Arthur Smith Woodward, formerly of the British Museum; Dr. V. van Straelen, director of the Royal Museum of Natural History in Brussels; Dr. Chester Stock, of the California Institute of Technology, and Edgar B. Howard of Philadelphia.

Mr. Howard was the Sheriock Holmes of this scientific inquiry. He scouted the evidence and then, like a good sleuth who doesn't want to disturb a single finger print, took the scientists down to New Mexico and let them look it over.

They found a "hearth," a mass of charcoal and half-burned bones of a now extinct species of bison. This puts man on the scene somewhere between ten thousand and fifteen thousand years ago.

NEW EVIDENCE

They have some fascinating new evidence, and some interesting "hunches," but there are still vast uncertainties and vast unexplored domains in piecing out the history of man.

Mr. Howard and his associates found no human bones around that pre-historic hearth, but the remains of the fire and weapons were, of course, evidence enough that man was there—and the mammoths were there, too.

Even the most reserved scientists are now admitting that man was in the Southwest when the world was young, and the possibility of his having started there is now wide open.

Marine Corps Efficiency Raised by Roosevelt

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

President Roosevelt's efforts to build up "the Common Defense" are again the target for an attack by a group of pork barrel politicians, legislative sappers and political publicity hounds.

It is alleged that since Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House and became Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, which includes the Marine Corps, "a reign of terror" has been established among the Officers of the Corps.

THE FACTS GIVEN

What are the facts? In 1934 the Congress, upon the recommendation of the President, enacted a new personnel bill, which applied to the Marine Corps the same system of promotion by selection successfully followed by the Navy since 1916.

Prior to the passage of this law Marine officers were promoted by seniority only until they reached the rank of colonel. All an officer had to do was to soldier along, behave himself well enough to escape disciplinary action and pass his annual physical examination.

Initiative and energy and more than average ability did not count. Under this system the lazy and less efficient were given the same promotion that the more efficient officers received.

The distinctive feature of promotion by the selective system which the last Congress inaugurated is that it offers a reward for merit. It opens an outlet to honorable ambition. It insures for an officer of creditable record, who is zealous in his profession, a chance to rise in rank and usefulness before he is too old for the Government to obtain the advantage of his superior ability. It applies to the Marine Corps the same competition and promotion that obtain in other walks of life.

You show yourself equal to your responsibilities and capable of higher responsibilities or you go out.

FAIR IN PRACTICE

It works well in the Navy and there is every reason why it should work well in the Marine Corps, which is a part of the Navy.

As in the navy, the law was framed to insure the honest and fair application of the sound principle of promotion for merit. The composition of the selection boards was fixed by law.

The secretary of the navy appoints these boards on the recommendation of the commandant of the corps, and the commandant of corps is nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Each board is required to consider carefully the complete professional record of every officer in every grade eligible for promotion to the next higher grade.

If the merit system of promotion had been applied in the Marine Corps from the day it was applied to the Navy it would have raised the standard of efficiency of the Corps and increased its effectiveness as an arm of the national defense.

President Roosevelt has good reason to be proud of the fact that the adoption of the merit system of promotion to the Marine Corps is one of the achievements of his Administration.

It will do much to increase the morale of the Corps at a time when morale throughout the armed services is put to the test by cowardly attacks upon Defenders with the Colors afield and afloat by both the tools and dupes of alien interests.

The Ladies Act

By Hendrik Van Loon

Twice during the last 12 months I have received a curious little book which pretended to give a complete list of all the well-known radicals of the United States.

They were marked copies.

Of course I looked. One always does. And then my name—usually misspelled—appeared, followed by the interesting information: "Contributors to the 'Nation'; has also visited Russia and had some of his books translated into Russian."

The dear old ladies who were responsible for these compilations were entirely right in what they said about me. I have quite often written for the "Nation."

But as the "Nation" is a very old weekly and one of our few liberal magazines, there is not (to the best of my knowledge) a single college professor or teacher in our great Republic who at one time or another has not appeared within its pages.

As for the remunerations for such articles, usually varying between $7.22 and sometimes as high as $11.97, these magnificent sums did not exactly hail from Russian sources.

In that case they would have been much more munificent and they would have been paid in gold.

How he manages to get by the U. S. customs inspectors, who almost clapped me into jail because a Soviet official friend had given me a very rare Kruger pound as a souvenir—that is riddle to me.

But the dear ladies (like the hardy mountaineers) do not care for trifles once they are on the warpath.

As far as I know, our rewards came out of the funds of the so-called Villard, who more or less ruined himself to give us at least one truly liberal weekly.

And as for the contents of the articles, they were exactly the same as those I am writing now. Which shows that this is a strange world, in which the ideas of "liberal" and "conservative" lie strangely intermixed and intermingled.

* * *

As for the second accusation—that I had actually been in Russia—there again the authors of these denunciations were right.

The Associated Press sent me to that country the year after I graduated because they were under the impression that I knew Slavic language, an opinion which unfortunately was not shared by the average Russian.

That was twenty-nine years ago. Since then, I have never been within a thousand miles of the Russian Frontier.

But the old yarn still lives. "He visited Russia," the dear ladies write. They don't, however, say when I was there last.

Text For Today "For the Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—I Samuel xvi, 7.
